Concert Review

Rutland Enjoys Magic of the Vermont S.

By JEAN SWAIN

For the third consecutive year, the Vermont Symphony Pops Concert took place under balmy evening skies Saturday at Giorgetti Park.

The annual event enjoys a well-earned reputation as one of the most popular listings in the area's cultural calendar.

In addition to the local VSO Friends, special sponsors were the directors of the Proctor Bank, as well as the city of Rutland through its recreation and parks department. Additional funding was provided by the Vermont Council on the Arts.

About 1,500 people, many of them youngsters, began converging on the grounds in the late afternoon, bringing picnic hampers, blankets, chairs, and an occasional well-behaved family dog.

Over everything hovered a multitude of VSO balloons. Several of these soon escaped to add a touch of pink or orange to the upper atmosphere.

Another kind of balloon also took to the air early in the proceedings.

A hot air balloon owned by Olin DeForge, one of the Proctor Bank directors, provided exciting pre-concert diversion as it rose slowly and drifted toward Pine Hill.

There is something magic about good music played well under the open evening sky.

Without the confining atmosphere of the formal concert hall, people can stroll barefoot on the lawn or lie on the ground listening in perfect contentment. If so inspired, parents can, and often do, pick up their little children and dance.

In fact, one of the best parts of this kind of scene is watching the children as they watch the musicians. All very quiet and attentive, sometimes they execute a little sort of jig, or pull their balloon strings to keep time.

Saturday's program provided just the right kind of music for everyone's enjoyment.

Rossini's William Tell Overture was the opening number, stirringly presented and bringing chuckles of response with its familiar "Lone Ranger" theme.

Next came three dance compositions, each with its own personality, each containing well-known themes.

"Un Bal," from the Symphonie Fantastique of Berlioz, and the first of two Slavonic dances by Dvorak gave voice to the graceful harp and dreamy strings.

Dvorak's second piece, a sturdy peasant dance, caught people up in its rhythmic measures.

In a change of pace, Borodin's "Polovetsian Dances," full of cymbals and tambourines, was a fine evocation of the mysterious and exotic.

Guest soloist Daisy Newman, in a stunning red gown, held everyone's attention as she took the

A Musical Encounter

As in past years, Saturday night's Vermont Symphony Pops Concert at Giorgetti Park proved to be a popular attraction for young and old alike. During a lull in the musical action, Heidi Soons, a member of the Vermont Symphony, demonstrated her harp for children attending the event. Concert Review, Page 24.

to open the second half of the evening's selections from Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess." Her rich, strong, sweet soprano voice and ear articulation, she evoked calls of "Bravo!" from the audience. A smashing performance to conclude the schedule. And at least as great a response came from the audience, who responded twice in answer to fervent calls for an encore.

The throng slowly left the park under the evening sky, more than one person the author felt that the musical experience just outweighed one of the great chords of life one night.

Midget League Champions

A Rotary South player beats the throw to first base during the Rutland City Midget League championship game against Suburban Propane at White's Playground Friday evening. Led by John Cassarino's grand slam home run in the fifth inning, Suburban Propane captured the championship with a 7-5 victory. Suburban Propane won the best-of-three series, 2-0, and finished the season with 16 consecutive wins. The team lost its first and only game of the year to Rotary. Cassarino's blast overcame a 4-2 deficit and gave pitcher Bryan Pell his eighth win against no defeats this season. Pell also belted two hits to support his own cause. Tommmy Gero had two hits, including a home run, for the losing team.

An Opera
In the Alley

The Rutland Recreation and Parks Department will sponsor a special presentation of the Lake George Opera Festival "Opera-On-Wheels" beginning at noon on Thursday, Aug. 1, in the Center Street Alley.

The performance is free and open to the public. The rain date is Aug. 16 at the same time and place.

The work to be presented is "The Four Note Opera" by American composer Tom Johnson. Slightly less than an hour in length, the one-act "Four Note Opera" is a musical farce, in fact a parody on opera itself and on opera singers.

The composer presents four opera singers: a soprano, a mezzo-soprano; a tenor and a baritone.

Staged by Maggie Harrer, "The Four Note Opera" will be performed by artist from the Lake George Festival's American Lyric Theater: Susan Gonzalez, the soprano; Cheryl Laser alternating in the performance with Cynthia Miller as the mezzo-soprano; Peter Emery alternating with Christopher Hux as the tenor; and Paul Francis Messal as the baritone.

A Big Night For Teens At The Ritz

By MONICA ALLEN

They started talking about it weeks ago and the phone began ringing at The Ritz Monday night, as parents and teens wanted to know details.

A few teenagers stopped by the Center Street nightclub Monday to see if they had the night of the party wrong.

It's Tuesday night, they were told.

The Ritz opened its doors Tuesday to more than 500 teenagers from throughout the region for its first alcohol-free night.

Ritz owners hope to hold similar teen nights, for youths ages 13-18, on Tuesdays during the rest of the summer. The nightclub has a musician scheduled for next Tuesday, but expects to run more teen nights.

Teens came decked out in new jeans, with summer tans and mischief in their eyes.

The dance floor area was more

A crowd of anxious teens waited outside The Ritz Tuesday night for a chance to sample the pleasures of adulthood.

than five degrees warmer than the rest of the nightclub as the youths boogied down to the tunes and the newest videos. White and rose colored lights flashed on their smiling sweat-streaked faces.

There wasn't much room to move on the dance floor, but the lithe teens managed to do as much moving as humanly possible.

The youths danced in groups of girls and boys. Some danced as couples. But the kids said it was cool to dance in groups of friends.

A disc jockey stood behind glass picking out the next numbers to spin.

The two large rooms of the nightclub hummed with excitement.

Those who couldn't fit on the dance floor lounged at little round tables, chatting and people watching people.

The boys, dressed in their best blazers, and the girls, wearing makeup, new earrings and high-heeled shoes, stood like adults at the bar. They ordered Cokes, Sprites and fruit juices and drank them out of plastic cups.

Groups of boys cruised through the crowd, trying to be cool, but not too cool to admit they came to the dance to meet girls.

More than 40 anxious teens waited in the warm summer air outside the nightclub for a few people to leave the dance. The bouncer said he couldn't let in any more because the club was packed. He held the teens back until people left.

Teens said their parents drove them to the dance.

Everyone knew the ground rules of the event: no smoking and no alcohol.

This didn't seem to bother them.

"Yeah, this is great," Katha

Pehm of Proctor said. "The music ... You can see a lot of people — your friends."

"A lot of us were really psyched up for it," Andrew Burton of Proctor said. There's not much to do in the summer time but swim and go to the movies, he added.

"It's something to do," Eric Bradley of Shrewsbury said: "The summer can get a little boring."

Gerry Vaughan, one of the owners of The Ritz, said the nightclub would try to run a teen night on other Tuesdays during the summer.

Vaughan said a number of cities, including Burlington, New York and San Francisco, had begun to hold teen nights at local bars and he thought it was time for Rutland to offer them.

The Ritz is working with the Rutland Recreation and Parks Department on the project.

Vaughan said he wanted to offer the teens "a classy place" where they could get dressed up and come to dance.

Vaughan added that it was this age group that buys the records and watches the videos that make it to the charts.

City Sponsors Free Concerts

The Rutland Recreation Department will sponsor the following concerts the week of July 29. The concerts are free and open to the public.

Tuesday, July 30 — the "Lunch with Music" concert from 12 to 1 p.m. will be in the Center Street Alley and will feature folk music.

Wednesday, July 31 — the "Seven to Sunset" concert from 7 to 9 p.m. will be at the Main Street Park and will feature the band Saltash Serenaders. The band plays a wide variety of folk music, traditional and contemporary music.

Thursday, Aug. 1 — a special performance of the Lake George Festival Opera will be held beginning at 12 p.m. in the Center Street Alley. The group will perform the "Four Note Opera," by American composer Tom Johnson.

Junior Golf Is on the Upswing

By BOB FREDETTE

You don't have to go very far to find someone who made a natural progression from caddy to golfer.

Those people will recall when country clubs had golf carts only so the head greenskeeper wouldn't have to drag a lawnmower all the way to the 13th green, or so that elderly members would still be able to play 18 holes. They'll tell you that once, clubs did not realize how much revenue they could generate by renting the automated beasts of burden that all but phased caddies out of existence.

Before the carts became popular items, a young person could scratch out a modest summer income, keep himself off the streets, and experience a brand-new world through a brand-new game.

The game was probably something the caddy had never thought he would want to play, but it's attraction would overcome him. Golf would eventually find a spot next to baseball and football and the other things he would consider to be fun and part of growing up in the summertime.

Sooner or later, the caddy would rustle up some shag balls and a rusty club or two and practice in his back yard, oblivious to the frustrations his parents would feel at his hacking up the lawn or knocking an occasional ball off the house.

Instead of sleeping late the one or two days a week he didn't try to be the first on line for the honor of lugging a 40-pound golf bag three-and-a-half miles, the caddy might get up at the same time to play. Only then would he realize that golf, once a very distant game, was not just for the wealthy and well-bred.

At the end of the cycle, the country club would benefit in an additional stream of younger players, as from the legions of caddies came some of its future members.

Some clubs even catered to the caddies: at Rutland Country Club, for example, Monday mornings were once designated "Caddies Days," and the club carriers could play free until noon-time. RCC even staged a once-a-summer tournament for the caddies, whose ages might range between nine and 19.

Mike O'Day, a junior competing for Fair Haven High School, blasts from a trap during the Division II finals at Rutland Country schoolboy level.

Last May, Fair Haven freshman Matt Wilson was medalist at the Vermont Division II state finals. At the same match, Burr & Burton, using four sophomore players, won the championship.

Rutland, which had dozens of caddying regulars 20 years ago, has been a juniors hotbed under very hard. We worked hard to keep the program going. I don't remember one year where we had less than 40 kids, then we shot it up to 70.

"I'd have to credit (Recreation Dept. head) John Cioffredi on his publicity for the kids in the area. He did a lot to get the kids to play.

There was a lull and that's why we went with John to start photo-away from winning a state title in only the second year of the team's existence.

"We don't only teach competition, but the golf pros promote golf course etiquette, that the game is just a game and cheating is not tolerated," Vergi said. "There's one thing about kids, they pay attention. You'd never see a caddy leave a divot ... It's Barre, too, has some 80 junior members, due in part to clinics Ross supervises.

"We also have a junior club championship, and we take them to junior Pro-Am's in the state and try to entice them into the junior PGA tour (a tour sponsored by Vermont pros).

"I think there's a basic growth

a kingpin among Vermont juniors supporters.

Reynolds established a terrific program at Manchester Country Club and has repeated history with a booming turnout at Mt. Anthony in Bennington.

Reynolds, with course owner Ted Price (another pro) giving him practically free rein, runs clinics for over 100 juniors aged seven to 15.

"You've got to get someone to promote it and get kids on the course. We do it free, we have the balls and clubs for it, and I get three or four kids from my high school team to help out," Reynolds stated.

"All you're doing, basically, is putting time into it, promoting the game, and keeping things going around the club. The guys (adults) take care of themselves but to really make it a club you have to promote the game to ladies and juniors. My belief is that (new) guys who are coming to the clubs are doing it."

A newcomer to make a big difference is Brattleboro Country Club pro Owen Baker.

Attendance jumped from 12 to 38 the year Baker took over the juniors clinics. Because he is also the greens chairman, Baker is on the course each day and will make himself available to young players with questions or problems.

"One basic thing you have to do is get their interest," said Baker, father of two-time state Am champion Shawn Baker. "The attention span of some of the younger kids isn't that great but if you keep their interest up ... the kids I have, have a great deal of interest."

Forty-four Brattleboro members are juniors whose families have not joined the club.

Baker adopted an innovative approach to promoting interest by establishing a club within the club. Brattleboro juniors comprise their own Board of Directors, handle their own funds, and run their own tournaments.

The juniors have their own Member-Guest tournament and, because there are three female members this year, "they have a Scotch Foursome (event)," Baker says with a chuckle.

"They do the whole thing and I oversee it. We have the shortest Board of Directors meetings on record. They say, 'We want to do

The game was probably something the caddy had never thought he would want to play, but its attraction would overcome him. Golf would eventually find a spot next to baseball and football and the other things he would consider to be fun and part of growing up in the summer time.

Sooner or later, the caddy would rustle up some shag balls and a rusty club or two and practice in his back yard, oblivious to the frustrations his parents would feel at his hacking up the lawn or knocking an occasional ball off the house.

Instead of sleeping late the one or two days a week he didn't try to be the first on line for the honor of lugging a 40-pound golf bag three-and-a-half miles, the caddy might get up at the same time to play. Only then would he realize that golf, once a very distant game, was not just for the wealthy and well-bred.

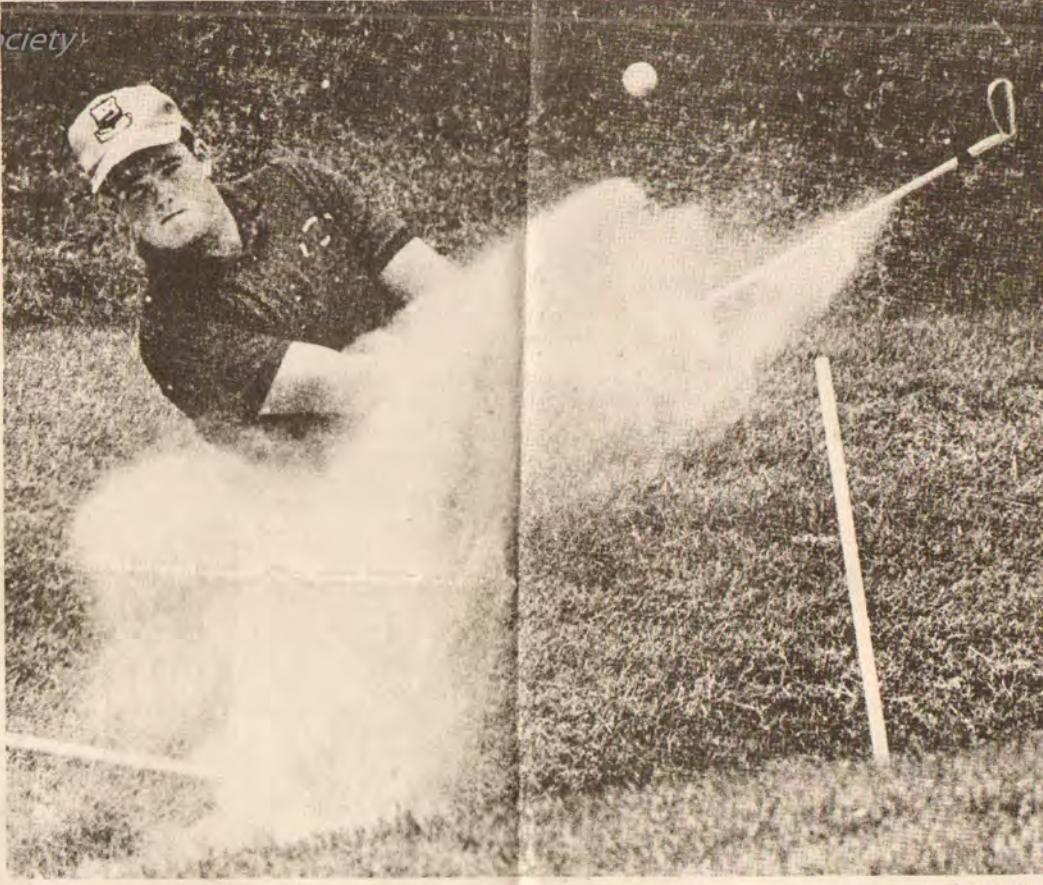

At the end of the cycle, the country club would benefit in an additional stream of younger players, as from the legions of caddies came some of its future members.

Some clubs even catered to the caddies: at Rutland Country Club, for example, Monday mornings were once designated "Caddies Days," and the club carriers could play free until noon-time. RCC even staged a once-a-summer tournament for the caddies, whose ages might range between nine and 19.

To some degree, the clubs caused a lull in membership growth by replacing the caddies with electric and gas-powered carts. But they are more than making up for it with clinics and competitions designed to lure youngsters to the golf course.

Youth involvement is a factor in the boom that golf is experiencing in Vermont. Memberships are growing larger across the state, with many clubs filled beyond their intended capacity.

One evidence of the effects of juniors programs is in the success of younger players on the schoolboy level.

Last May, Fair Haven freshman Matt Wilson was medalist at the Vermont Division II state finals. At the same match, Burr & Burton, using four sophomore players, won the championship.

Rutland, which had dozens of caddying regulars 20 years ago, has been a juniors hotbed under the influence of head pro Henry Vergi.

Of its 579 members, Rutland lists 80 juniors, and approximately 70 students in a teaching program.

"I've won the Vermont (PGA) pro-junior tournament (a four-player team event) nine of 13 times with my junior members," Vergi says with pride. "We've always pushed for the kids. There were certain caddies I helped and the junior program has helped, too."

"(Members) like Charlie French have worked with me very hard. We worked hard to keep the program going. I don't remember one year where we had less than 40 kids, then we shot it up to 70.

(Dept. head) John Cioffredi on his publicity for the kids in the area. He did a lot to get the kids to play. There was a lull and that's why we went with John to start promoting to get kids to play. There's been a pick-up. The game has become more popular.

Two-time Vermont Amateur champion Art Bemis is heading Vergi's program at RCC this year, while teaching pro Jim Hefti conducts clinics at Vergi's driving range.

Hefti is also responsible for producing juniors like Wilson and Mike O'Day with the program he started at the Lake Bomoseen course several years ago. Both were members of the 1985 Fair Haven team that came a shot away from winning a state title in only the second year of the team's existence.

"We don't only teach competition, but the golf pros promote golf course etiquette, that the game is just a game and cheating is not tolerated," Vergi said. "There's one thing about kids, they pay attention. You'd never see a caddy leave a divot ... It's bred into them that they can't."

Barre course pro Bill Ross Jr., attributes growth at his club to universalizing the game.

"Golf in central Vermont is definitely on the upswing and it's constructive and it's healthy. We've gone from 250 members in 1976 (when he arrived) to 525, just by activating junior and lady players," said Ross, whose club is home course for two high school teams.

"We just said look, let's encourage people (to play). When I came here ... we wanted to see a nice, healthy club."

Barre, too, has some 80 junior members, due in part to clinics Ross supervises.

"We also have a junior club championship, and we take them to junior Pro-Am's in the state and try to entice them into the junior PGA tour (a tour sponsored by Vermont pros).

"I think there's a basic growth ... there was a caddy stage, I'm from the tail end of it. We used to caddy and play, and then for a long time golf was idle, basically because of the stigma that it was made for the wealthy. Now we have more of a community-type golf course.

"Now our problems are, where will we put the members?" Ross said.

"I think one of the reasons junior golf is on the upswing is that we've got a different calibre of golf professional in the state that I think is more conscious of the juniors," said Leo Reynolds,

a kingpin among Vermont juniors supporters.

Reynolds established a terrific program at Manchester Country Club and has repeated history with a booming turnout at Mt. Anthony in Bennington.

Reynolds, with course owner Ted Price (another pro) giving him practically free rein, runs clinics for over 100 juniors aged seven to 15.

"You've got to get someone to promote it and get kids on the course. We do it free, we have the balls and clubs for it, and I get three or four kids from my high school team to help out," Reynolds stated.

"All you're doing, basically, is putting time into it, promoting the game, and keeping things going around the club. The guys (adults) take care of themselves but to really make it a club you have to promote the game to ladies and juniors. My belief is that (new) guys who are coming to the clubs are doing it."

A newcomer to make a big difference is Brattleboro Country Club pro Owen Baker.

Attendance jumped from 12 to 38 the year Baker took over the juniors clinics. Because he is also the greens chairman, Baker is on the course each day and will make himself available to young players with questions or problems.

"One basic thing you have to do is get their interest," said Baker, father of two-time state Am champion Shawn Baker. "The attention span of some of the younger kids isn't that great but if you keep their interest up ... the kids I have, have a great deal of interest."

Forty-four Brattleboro members are juniors whose families have not joined the club.

Baker adopted an innovative approach to promoting interest by establishing a club within the club. Brattleboro juniors comprise their own Board of Directors, handle their own funds, and run their own tournaments.

The juniors have their own Member-Guest tournament and, because there are three female members this year, "they have a Scotch Foursome (event)," Baker says with a chuckle.

"They do the whole thing and I oversee it. We have the shortest Board of Directors meetings on record. They say, 'We want to do this, we want to do this, and we want to do this.' I say, 'That sounds good, do it.'"

The juniors elected their own president, treasurer, handicap chairman and tournament chairman, and are getting the feel of running a club.

"Ten, 12 years down the road, they're the ones who are going to be doing it," Baker explained.

"Quite a few clubs forgot ... they've made the fatal mistake of not letting the juniors do this and that, restricting them. And these are the kids who are going to be their members in the future."

Cioffredi Urges New Rec Center

Rutland Recreation and Parks Superintendent John W. Cioffredi wants a new recreation center.

No feasibility studies please, he told Rutland aldermen in a letter Monday. Instead, he requested that Mayor John J. Daley establish a committee to draw up a design and get a cost estimate for a new center.

Cioffredi said the federal regulations to ensure that handicapped people can get into public buildings and take part in public programs would force him to stop using most of the Edwin W. Lawrence Recreation Center.

He has already planned to relocate programs this fall that were held on the second and third floor of the Center Street building.

Cioffredi said it would be less expensive and more practical for the city to build a new recreation center then to make the current center accessible to the handicapped.

Aldermen Monday referred the request to the aldermanic Recreation Committee.

On Aug. 14 from 7 to 9 p.m., the "Seven to Sunset" concert in the Main Street Park will feature the popular folksinger Dick McCormack.

On Aug. 16 from noon to 1 p.m., the Lake George Opera Festival will be returning to perform the "Four Note Opera" in Center Street Alley.

The concerts are sponsored by the Rutland Recreation Department and are open to the public free of charge.

Opera Performs
Friday in Rutland

8/13 The Lake George Opera Festival will return to Rutland's Center Street Alley on Aug. 16 to perform the "Four Note Opera." The performance will begin at noon. The concert is free and people are encouraged to bring their bag lunch. The program is sponsored by the Rutland Recreation Department.

The group is doing a returning performance of "The Four Note Opera" because members of the group were not able to perform on Aug. 1.

The work was composed by American composer Tom Johnson. The one-act opera is a musical farce, in fact a parody on opera and opera singers. The performance is just under an hour in length, providing for an excellent lunchtime concert.

Teen Entertainment 8-15

Some of my fondest memories include weekend evenings at "Teen Town" (held upstairs over Wolk's Tots & Teens) with the late Gordie Webster as our "D.J." and all around good friend. My thanks to the owners of the Ritz, Cousins, the Recreation Department and, hopefully, others in the area for providing some good, wholesome memories for today's teens.

For us it's worth the drive from Pittsford to Rutland because at least we know that our teenagers will have "something to do" as opposed to just hanging around."

This is a real community service and I'm sure this will bring in the business of some grateful parents, as well as being a great time for the "kids!" Keep up the good work!

Chamber Booth Called Eyesore

8-19

By STEVE COSTELLO

A Rutland businessman wants the Rutland Region Chamber of Commerce's information booth in Main Street Park torn down. The building, built in the mid-1960s, has not been used this year in an attempt by the chamber to save money.

Peter Louras, owner of Louras' on West Street, recently sent a letter to the Board of Aldermen asking it to consider removing the building or tearing it down.

"It's an eyesore," Louras said Sunday.

He said he thought the park should be used for cultural events and the building was detracting from the park's beauty.

"I feel that the building should be taken down and grassed over," Louras said. "It's sitting there useless."

He said the park belonged to the city, and should not be used for any commercial reason.

"I was against it when they built it and I'm still against it," Louras said. "I want the park to be given back to the people of Rutland."

Walter Capen, the chamber's executive director, said the building was not being used now, but might be used next year.

He said the chamber decided to provide information about the region at its office on Court Street because that would save five days' worth of pay.

Office workers at the chamber give visitors information, and a extra worker only has to be paid for the weekends, Capen said.

Some Rutland businessmen have complained that people are not stopping while driving through the city because the information booth is closed.

Capen said that had not happened, however. Final figures will not be available until the end of the summer, he said, but it does not look like there has been a decline in visits because of the move.

"It looks like it's holding up for the same number of people," he said.

"We want to keep a careful count and see how it comes out at the end of the year," Capen said.

The building, on the park's northeast corner, was built with money from donations and with city money, former Mayor Harold Nichols said.

The Vermont Marble Co. donated the stone used, and the city picked up all expenses not covered by donations, Nichols said. The building belongs to the city.

The following activities are taking place the week of Oct. 7-11 at the Rutland Recreation and Parks Department Senior Center.

Monday: women's fitness, 9 a.m.; yoga, 10 a.m.; piano lessons, 10 a.m.; respiratory workshop, 12:30-2 p.m.; quilting, 1 p.m. (first session); evening whist, 7 p.m.

Rutland City police officers talk Monday to Nelda Bomberly, a homeless woman who has been camping in the bandstand in Main Street Park for the past few days. Police have given her permission to stay at the bandstand.

Woman, Dog Find Shelter In Rutland City Bandstand'

By MONICA ALLEN

A homeless woman and her Doberman pinscher have been living in the Rutland bandstand in Main Street Park for the past two days.

Police have decided not to force the woman to leave.

Rutland Mental Health Services Inc. and other social service agencies have been unable to provide Nelda Bomberry with shelter. The city has no shelter for homeless women.

Rutland City police were called to the park Monday afternoon by Rutland Recreation Department workers who found the elderly woman would not leave the bandstand.

Police had been called Sunday evening to help remove her for the weekly Sunday night concert of the Rutland City Band. She left the bandstand for the concert and apparently returned later.

On Monday, Patrolmen Rod Pulter and John Tuepker talked to Bomberry and decided not to force her to leave.

"We have no place to go," the woman told the officers, referring to the pet dog she had on a leash. "We have no transportation."

Vermont State Hospital workers dropped the woman off at a Rutland motel Thursday, police and mental health workers said. She was turned away from the motel because dogs were not allowed. She has refused to part from her dog.

Bomberry spent Thursday night at the Rutland Police Station and apparently spent Friday night on the lawn of the Rutland Mental Health building on South Main Street.

(See Page 20: Woman)

Woman

She was in the city park on Sunday.

"We're going to allow her to stay there," Sgt. Bernard Mulcahey said Monday. "There's no law that says you have to live in a house."

She seems to be eating and feeding the dog, he said.

Rutland Mental Health cannot admit her unless she is a danger to herself or others, mental health workers said.

Police said Bomberry was examined during the weekend by a psychiatrist, who said she was not mentally ill, Mulcahey said.

Claudia Stone, executive director of the state hospital, said the woman had the legal right to leave the hospital last week.

Police questioned Monday why she was dropped off at Rutland and questioned why the dog was allowed to stay at the state hospital in Waterbury.

Bomberry apparently has a relative in Brandon. Police have attempted to convince her to return to Brandon, but she is unwilling.

Rutland Mental Health workers attempted Friday to separate her from her dog in order to get shelter. But Bomberry has been unwilling to do that.

She is living out of a number of suitcases and some plastic bags.

'Eyesore' in the Park

8/20

Why the Chamber of Commerce information booth in Main Street Park should be singled out as an "eyesore" over and above other unsightly nuisances around the city isn't readily explainable.

After all the booth is one of the few city structures in the public eye built of marble that calls attention to the importance of that kind of building material to the economy of Rutland. When erected, it replaced a wood frame structure that might have qualified more accurately for the eyesore epithet.

The booth was constructed by volunteer labor and by donations during a more active period in Chamber history when that kind of project seemed to enlist enthusiastic community support. Herald files disclose that the booth was constructed during the Chamber presidency of Henry Carris when Harold Nichols was mayor.

Cash and material donations came to some $22,500. Payson Webber drew the plans and materials were contributed by the Vermont Marble Co., Rutland Plywood, Johnson Building Supply, Rutland Roofing, Canney-Plue and Mac Equipment and Steel Co. The foundation was laid by Joseph Carrara & Sons, Earl Spencer donated carpenters and heating was contributed by Central Vermont Public Service.

The City of Rutland became the owner of the building when it was learned that retention of ownership on city land by the Chamber would have been illegal.

The project was not greeted by universal enthusiasm. A leading opponent was Alderman Craigie Perkins who was inclined to view most Chamber activities with jaundiced eye.

Bomberry Back In City Bandstand

Nelda Bomberry returned Tuesday to the bandstand in Main Street Park in Rutland.

She staked her claim to the bandstand when she laid down her small rug and tied her Doberman pinscher "Joppa" to the railing.

The elderly woman had been living in the bandstand last week until she was offered a room by a Pittsfield woman.

Rutland Police Sgt. James Berger said Tuesday the accommodations in Pittsfield had been temporary.

Berger said Bomberry called police Monday night to say she would be returning to the city. Berger said she would receive her first supplemental social security check by the end of this week and this would help her pay for shelter.

Berger said there was a possibility the woman could stay at the Rutland County Battered Women's shelter, but she would have to part with her dog.

Police have allowed the woman to stay in the bandstand. "It's not our intention to put her out of the bandstand," Berger said.

However, she will have to clear out of the concert at least temporarily Wednesday night. A country music concert sponsored by the recreation department is scheduled to take place in the evening.

Bomberry was dropped off at a Rutland motel on Aug. 15 by employees of the Vermont State Hospital in Waterbury, where she had been a patient on a voluntary admission. She was turned away from a motel when she refused to part with her dog.

For the next five days, Bomberry stayed on the lawn of the Rutland Mental Health building, in the police station, at the Rutland Regional Medical Center or in the city bandstand.

Shelter was offered to her in Rutland on the condition she part with her dog and place it in a kennel. She refused.

Rutland Mental Health and state hospital officials said the woman could not be involuntarily admitted to the mental health system because she was not a danger to herself or other people.

Softball Team Deprived

We, the players of CJ's girls' softball team, feel that we were taken from first place and placed at the bottom of the league because of a peace of paper.

Our team started with the same girls at the beginning of the season that we ended up with. We didn't bring in any "ringers."

Because of a little bad sportsmanship among our team competitors the roster was checked and a couple of our team members had not signed. Because of this our team had to forfeit all games played prior to this protest.

The protest was not brought about until the last game of the season.

Why wait?

If it takes a piece of paper to win the league, then we hope it makes them happy.

Because of our forfeits other teams began to scramble and, rumors have it, were allowed to sign the roster the last week. If this is so, then we hope your conscience can rest in peace.

We were told that we are the best team in the league and would have to go "A League" next year even though we are last place. Is that fair?

We won the league with a 12-2 record but yet we were given last place because of a piece of paper.

As a team we are the best team in our eyes for sportsmanship and performance. We won the league fair and square except for that piece of paper. We had a super team, a super sponsor and the best super coach you could ask for. We wouldn't trade any of them in for a peace of paper.

If that's what it takes to win, it's yours. Congratulations!

Mayor Healy Given Emotional Tribute

By YVONNE DALEY

It was an emotional moment Wednesday when the organist at St. Peter's Church played "Oh, Danny Boy" at the funeral of former Rutland Mayor Daniel J. Healy, who died Monday at age 87.

The song was one of Healy's favorites. It was also appropriate because it brought the right kind of nostalgia to the event. The song elicits old-fashioned feelings of sadness at the loss of a loved one but also makes a statement about the endurance of love.

In his eulogy, the Rev. Fernand Couture spoke at length of Healy's contribution to his neighborhood, city, state, and church as mayor of Rutland from 1949 to 1957 and from 1959 to 1961.

This contribution was apparent as well based on the number of state and local dignitaries who came to bid farewell to Healy. Four of the five living mayors of the city were in attendance — current Mayor John J. Daley; Harold J. Nichols, mayor from 1965 to 1971; William H. Foley Sr., mayor from 1971 to 1973; and Sen. Gilbert G. Godnick, D-Rutland, who was mayor from 1973 to 1981.

Francis F. Waterman, who was mayor from 1957 to 1959, was unable to attend because of poor health.

Sen. Patrick J. Leahy, D-Vt., Sen. Flossie Robillard, D-Rutland, and Rep. Alexander F. Keefe, D-Rutland, were also in attendance. Rutland Recreation and Parks Superintendent John W. Cioffredi, who had been appointed by Healy, also attended the service. Healy had been instrumental in expanding the city's recreational services.

"When God created Dan he gave him many gifts," said Couture. The ability "to be a public servant for the benefit of the community" was one of those gifts.

Another gift was Healy's great oratory skill, Couture said, alluding in particular to the speech Healy gave many years ago on St. Patrick's Day, a speech that has been played on March 17 on local radio nearly every year since.

He noted that Rutlanders knew Healy as "The Lion of Forest Street," both for his eloquence and for his roots on Forest Street. St. Peter's Church was Healy's parish church for many years, and the surrounding neighborhood was dearest to his heart.

"He roared so that the poor could be heard," the priest said.

Couture said Healy also demonstrated the supernatural gifts that God gives to man — faith and hope. "He loved people and made people love him," he said.

Healy was known as a bridge-builder, said Couture, referring to his work as mayor to bring about the reconstruction of the West Street, State Street and Crescent Street bridges over the East Creek, which had been destroyed in the flood of 1947. As much, he was known as "a builder of spiritual bridges for the city of Rutland, and the state as well," Couture said.

No tribute to Healy could be complete without mentioning his pride in his Irish nationality. "There is nothing like an Irishman," said Couture, quoting from the poem of that title by the late Cardinal Richard Cushing of Boston.

"What is it to be Irish?" asked the priest, quoting from Healy's famous St. Patrick's Day speech. "To have the gift of tongues. To walk in complete mystical understanding for a full 24 hours" every day of a man's life.

"Dan leaves a mark of life for us to reflect on, especially here in the city of Rutland, because his style of life changed many styles of life. He loved God and his neighbor. This is what life meant for him," the priest said.

Healy was one of the most colorful and beloved of Rutland's mayors. He was known for his formal attire; he was often dressed in a suit with a carnation pinned to the lapel, with a bowler hat. But he was known as well for his role as a leader of state Democrats, for his championing of the poor and the down-trodden.

Healy was the first of the Irish Catholic Democrats living in the working-class southwest section of Rutland to wrest power from the more well-established Republicans.

He was of the old school of Irish politics, active in national politics, a good friend of Boston Mayor James Michael Curley, and friends with Democratic presidential candidate Adlai Stevenson and President John F. Kennedy.

In his first election, Healy defeated the late Wayne N. Temple by 920 votes.

Besides bringing numerous repairs to those sections of the city ravaged by the 1947 flood, Healy also was responsible for expanding the city's recreation program, acquiring additional parking space in the business district, improving the Rutland airport and making other improvements to the city.

Healy finished his career in a lifetime job as Vermont director of the Federal Housing Administration in Burlington.

Burial followed the funeral service at Calvary Cemetery.

Memorial contributions may be made to Mount St. Joseph Development Fund in care of Mount St. Joseph's Academy.

Girls' Softball Rebuttal

To the C.J.'s Girls Softball Team: I am replying to your recent letter to the Rutland Herald complaining of a season of forfeits for your team.

This was done because a certain "peace" of paper known as a roster was not signed by two girls who played all season long. Is it okay for you to get four strikes and me only three? A rule is a rule.

Everyone else in the city had to sign a roster and pay a $10 player assessment fee for the privilege of playing the Recreation League for the summer.

The reason this was not brought to anyone's attention until the last regular game was because it was not noted until then.

If you can recall, that particular game should have actually never been played. The team you played should have won by forfeit to begin with.

The game was supposed to be played earlier in the season, and they had their whole team there. Your coach and six players were the only ones to show up even though it was listed in the Rutland Herald sports page of the time and place of the game. But alas it was ruled that the game must be played at a different time and date.

If your team was the "best" in the league, why did you choose to forfeit the tournament which would have allowed you to prove that your team was Number One? It just seems like sour grapes and that "peace" of paper sure helps Mr. Maniery run the league smoothly.

Congratulations should go out to the Marble Bank girls for winning the league (who by the way defeated C.J.'s team during the season) and to the girls of Michaelangelo's for capturing the tournament. It was a great season and for the most part a fun time.

Chamber Plans 'Fanfare to Fall'

93 The 1985 "Fanfare to Fall" being planned by the Rutland Region Chamber of Commerce Arts Committee will be the "best $3 bargain you ever saw..." according to Ed Pickett, chairman of the marketing and public relations sub-committee of the arts group.

Offering more than 40 varied events, including music, dance, folk, choral music, artistic displays of different kinds, events for young children and teens, and a host of other attractions, the "Fanfare to Fall 1985," is going to be a weekend celebration that no one should miss.

Planned for the weekend of Oct. 11, 12 and 13, beginning in the early evening and continuing until the final concert on Sunday evening, the weekend will be filled with activities for young and old, jazz enthusiasts as well as classical music lovers, modern dance and folk dance buffs and just about everyone else who appreciates a good time.

Program committee planners Alan Walker, Heidi Mitchell, Betty Gaechter and Sue Darow have come up with a series of activities that runs the gamut to make the "Fanfare" attractive to all.

Funded in part by grants from local industry and the Vermont Council on the Arts, the festival is the second event sponsored by the chamber and the arts group. Last year's festival was held in September and the interest of the region in the event prompted the chamber and its arts committee to begin early in the year to put this year's event together.

Fund-raising is being chaired by Tom O'Brien. Betty Ann Martin is general chairman of the arts committee.

The committee is made up of 22 Rutland area people who are involved in, or have an avid interest in, the various art and cultural activities in the Rutland region.

Gallery visitors are invited to browse through the "Now and Then" Gift Shop located inside the gallery and managed by Ednah Appell and Edith H. Smith. Encroaching on Public

"It makes me so sad that I can't go up into the castle!" For several weeks now, those have been the words of my three-year-old son as we walk in the park. The castle or whatever imaginary vehicle it might be for him is the bandstand in the city park.

A recent Saturday evening (9/14) as we took one of our frequent walks in the park, as in previous times, we were unable to get close to the bandstand. It seems as though it has become the permanent residence of a woman and her dog that barks ferociously at a mere step towards the stairs.

Peeking between the wall and floor I could see the woman sleeping on mattresses; belonging and dog excrement all over the floor and Lord knows what else.

How could this be? As a city taxpayer one who has enjoyed the use of the park, I wonder why one person is allowed to dominate the use of, or live in, the bandstand. How does one person obtain this exclusive right?

I have lost any feelings of sympathy for this person when I know so many situations have been offered to her yet she has refused. I don't understand and certainly my youngster doesn't.

Are there not some rules or regulations such as loitering, vagrancy, health, etc. that may be questioned here?

Should I assume the city condones this and will allow it to continue or will the park soon become public again — a place of beauty for all to enjoy. If not then I will recommend to any homeless person the bandstand in the park — convenient to downtown, pleasant surroundings, large landscaped lot and cheap rent if any!

fright night in Rutland

As the mysterious day grows closer, out of closets and attics come costume jewelry, out-dated clothes and strange hats. From the stores people carry bags filled with yards of outrageous material, fur and all kinds of body make-up. Frost is on the pumpkin, the Vermont moon is bright and houses are all lit up. Sewing machines are humming and things are being glued, painted and stapled together. Witches are brewing, cowboys are growing and ghosts and gobblins of every shape and size are becoming less of an illusion and more of a reality.

October 31 in downtown Rutland looks fairly routine. People are going about their daily chores, knowing at dusk many will transform into their wild-est fantasy creatures. "What will you be tonight", is a question that is quietly whispered. A smile will be the only answer.

As 5:45 p.m. approaches, Halloween in Rutland takes an unusual pos. All the creatures, maidens and monsters, who only hours before may have been lawyers, accountants, secretaries or bank executives, begin to gather behind the shops of the Rutland Plaza for the "spookiest" parade you will ever see.

Led by the Mayor and the Pumpkin Princess these transformd people parade through Rutland to the delight of the thousands that line the parade route (many in costumes that are just as outrageous as the paraders). High School Bands, all in costume blare out notice that the scariest creatures that you have ever seen are on their way. Floats and majorettes dressed like you have never seen before add to the excitement and you will know that this is the most unusual experince you have ever had.

The wind-up of the parade is in the Center Street Alley where the unveiling of Jack-O-Lantern takes place. Jack-O-Lantern is the Halloween Parade "Grand Marshall". He or she are prominent citizens who are unknown to the crowd until the unveiling ceremony. Through the weeks prior to Halloween, clues are given in the newspaper and posted at elementary schools for kids to guess who is behind the mask. To the person who correctly guesses who Jack-O-Lantern is, goes a new shiney bicycle.

The parade is in its 26th year and has grown both in participants and onlookers. There are also trophies for the most creative, most original and the best show float. Other trophies are for best majorettes and best costumed band.

The parade is open to anyone or group from anywhere. So if you are visiting Rutland, Halloween here is your chance to do something funky and have a tremendous amount of fun doing it. Just call the Recreation and Parks Department before Halloween Day, to register. The number is 773-1822 and the line up is at 5:45 p.m. in the Rutland Shopping Plaza. The parade begins at 6:30 p.m. If you would rather be a spectator.

The parade is just the beginning of the festivities. After the parade the Moose Club on Center Street holds a party for the kids and their parents. This is free and provides a safe place for kids to go in costume and have a good time. Also many restaurants and lounges have Halloween Parties offering prizes for costumed patrons.

Halloween is coming, and Rutland is the Place to be. Come, as anyone, anything, but not as yourself.

Men's Winter Basketball Meeting 10/9

The Rutland Recreation Department will hold an Organizational Meeting on Thursday, Oct. 10, at 7 p.m. for the Adult Men's Winter Basketball League.

Anyone who would like to enter a team in this year's league is asked to have a representative present. Rosters will be given out.

Rutland Ruggers in Scoreless Tie

The Rutland Area Rugby Football Club sponsored by the Rutland Recreation Department hosted Mad River Rugby Club on Saturday, Sept. 28.

Mad River in previous matches against Rutland has beaten Rutland soundly. Saturday, however, was different as the well-conditioned and disciplined Rutland Club held Mad River to a scoreless game.

After two, hard-hitting 40-minute halves, the score remained 0-0.

Rutland will play again Saturday, Oct. 12 against the Adirondack Rugby Club at home.

Members of Girl Scout Troop 343 helped the Rutland Garden Club plant more than 500 crocus bulbs along the bank in front of the Rutland Senior Citizens Center Wednesday. The planting is a club memorial to Julia Granger, who died last year at age 100. Mrs. Granger was the last surviving charter member of the club. Some of the scouts who helped were (from left) Jennifer Gallipo, Ann Romano and Colleen Crowley. There are more than 3,000 bulbs along the bank.

Giants Still Perfect

Brett Stickney gathered three touchdown receptions from quarterback Aaron Paul, who was 11-for-15 on the day and had one TD reception himself, as the Giants, now 4-0, routed the Eagles, 38-8, in a City League flag football game Sunday. Sam Porcaro and Eddie Ryan also had a touchdown apiece, as the Giants' line of George Parker, Matthew Rogers and Erik McLaren played an outstanding game. T.J. Sabaka scored the only touchdown for the Eagles, now 1-3.

Can You Guess Jack O'Lantern?

The Halloween goblins are beginning to rattle their chains in anticipation of their big night out on the town. And Rutlanders know that when the goblins are restless, it means the annual Rutland Halloween parade is approaching.

The star of the parade, as always, is Mr. Jack O'Lantern, a local dignitary who dons a fiendish mask. Rutland City school children are invited to enter the contest to guess Mr. Jack O'Lantern's identity.

Children may drop their guesses in a box provided at schools or at the Rutland Recreation Department office on Center Street. Include name, address, school and age. The drawing will take place at the conclusion of the parade in the Center Street Alley. The winner gets a bicycle donated by K-Mart department store.

The winner will receive the "Queen's" silver bowl and a $50 savings bond donated by Howard Bank. In addition, the winner will receive a dinner certificate for two.

The crowned queen will reign over the parade on Thursday, Oct. 31.

Crowds Slim For Fanfare Arts Festival

By MONICA ALLEN

There was plenty of top flight entertainment, but the audiences for the second annual Fanfare to Fall Arts Festival were small.

Small groups of people attended concerts of jazz music, folksinging, Renaissance music, magic shows, theater and other art events.

The Rutland Region Chamber of Commerce Arts Committee organized the 2½-day festival and scheduled more than 24 separate shows. The Bourbon Street Brass, a Dixieland combo, kicked off the weekend event Friday night at the Grace Congregational United Church of Christ.

The festival closed with a choral music program put on by local choral groups at the church.

Betty Ann Martin, one of the organizers, said she disappointed more people hadn't come to the various events.

She attributed the small audiences to a lack of publicity and some confusion about the location of the events. Martin also said some locations might have been a deterrent.

Concerts and various performances were held in four different churches, a downtown nightclub, the Opera House and the Lawrence Recreation Center.

People might not have been as intrigued by the Bourbon Street Brass, a lively combo of young musicians, because they were performing in a church hall, Martin said. There wasn't one young man in the audience, Martin said.

About 100 people attended the event. More would have been welcomed.

The Ritz, however, a Center Street nightclub, was a perfect location for a Saturday performance by The Vermont Jazz Ensemble. The ensemble played during the noon hour for a crowd of about 100 people.

Big band music filled the two softly lighted, cozy rooms of the club. People sat at the small round tables, sipping drinks or eating lunch. The audience of young, middle-aged and old people kept time to "In the Mood," a Glenn Miller piece and "New York, New York." A mother danced her baby to the music on her lap. And a child made a doll dance to the song.

Bringing art to the people of Rutland would be easier if there was one central performing hall, Martin said. "We really need the Paramount," she added. The Paramount is a downtown theater that needs major renovations before it can be used as a city entertainment center.

Other events during the weekend included clog dancing by the Green Mountain Cloggers, magic show done by Steven Finer, a one-woman dramatic show entitled "Early Vermont Women," performed by Mary Okin, medieval music performed by the Fire and Lightening Consort and many more musical and theatrical events.

About 50 people came to the finale, a Choral Concert, at Grace Church. The Cantabile Singers, the Rutland Chorale and Christ the King Cantata Choir performed a variety of classical and religious pieces.

"I would hope that next year we could do it and do it right," Martin said, assessing the weekend Sunday night.

Martin said she felt it was difficult to attract local people to art events. One woman who attended a number of the performances said Rutland people were not generally interested in classical music. Much of the music was classical.

Martin said many of the people attending the festival were tourists. The goal of the event was to bring art to the people and bring the people into downtown Rutland.

Martin also said the arts committee might consider breaking away from the chamber and not having chamber sponsorship next year.

"The chamber is concerned about business," Martin said.

Although the chamber sponsored the event, the committee made all the arrangements and sought financial support from the business community.

Last year's premiere of Fanfare to Fall was also a disappointment for many of the same reasons Martin called this year a disappointment. The Vermont artists brought their shows, but people from the region just didn't attend.

However, Martin said she was determined to make the program work. She said the people who attended the events this year had nothing but praise for the performances they saw. The admission was $2 for an event or $3 for a weekend pass.

Last year, festival organizers went into debt by approximately $3,000. This year, Martin said she suspected the festival would not break even. However, Ed Pickett, the owner of WHWB, has agreed to underwrite any shortfall.

The festival cost the committee approximately $8,000 to put on. Committee members raised $3,800 from local businesses and banks. Admission revenues have not yet been tallied.

While performances were going on in halls throughout downtown Rutland, artists and craftsmen set up a two-day show and sale in the Main Street Park.

The 24th annual "Art in the Park" drew about 8,000 people on Saturday, the largest crowd the show has ever had in one day, according to Ralf Adolphsson, show chairman.

The crisp autumn sun brought mobs of leafpeepers through Rutland and many stopped to view the art show. On Sunday, however, a rainy morning and a damp, cloudy afternoon whittled the number of artists and craftsmen from 125 to 20. The leaf-peepers also dwindled.

But the diehard artists said it was worth setting up the plastic tents.

People seem to be more eager to buy today, in the rain, one artist said. They are less distracted by the beauty of nature, she said.

Polling Places Are Selected

Polling places for Rutland City's five newly established wards were chosen by an ad hoc committee on Friday.

The Rutland Board of Aldermen must approve the five voting places at a Board of Civil Authority meeting Tuesday.

A committee rushed to find polling places so that places would be established in time for a special election to vote on whether the city should withdraw from the Rutland County Solid Waste District. The district, formed by 26 municipalities in the region, has contracted to have a trash-to-energy plant built in Rutland.

The new polling places are as follows: Ward 1, the Senior Citizens' Center off Deer Street; Ward 2, Christ the King School off South Main Street; Ward 3A, City Hall; Ward 3B, Northwest Elementary School; and Ward 4, Lincoln Elementary School.

Some polling places, including City Hall, may be temporary.

Overtime Pay Bill Hailed by Jeffords

Vermont Press Bureau

MONTPELIER — Legislation approved by the U.S. House of Representatives Monday relating to the use of compensatory time for public employees was hailed by Congressman James M. Jeffords, R-Vt., as a "fair solution to a very serious problem."

The measure offsets a high court decision that threatened the use of compensatory time as an alternative to overtime pay for public employees.

A U.S. Supreme Court ruling last spring prompted the U.S. Department of Labor to forbid the use of leave or compensatory time, in lieu of overtime wages for employees who worked beyond their regular work week.

Many municipal workers around the nation commonly take compensatory time instead of overtime wages. Bureaucrats around the nation said the ruling could cost them thousands of dollars in overtime payments and appealed to Congress to alter the ruling.

Vermont League of Cities and Towns officials estimated the ruling would result in services to communities being cut or municipal budgets dramatically rising.

Vermont State Employees Association members circulated a petition which garnered hundreds of signatures, asking Jeffords and the rest of the Vermont Congressional delegation to work for changes in the comp time ruling.

The new amendment would allow public employers the option of offering compensatory time at the rate of one and one-half times their regular hourly wage. But that compensatory time could not exceed 480 hours for seasonal, emergency and public safety employees and 180 hours for all other public employees. Once the maximum is reached, overtime pay would have to be given and no more compensatory time would be allowed.

'Baby Kong'

'The Devil'

'Goofy'

Mr. Jack O'Lantern

'Tina Turner' was among the celebrities who appeared in the Rutland Halloween parade Thursday night.

A Few Words With the Devil & Co.

By KEVIN O'CONNOR

The devil sauntered down the sidewalk along Rutland's Merchants Row.

Excuse me, sir, what brings you to the city?

"Looking for bed and board," the devil replied. "Want to come with me?"

No, thanks, I'd rather watch the stars shine this Halloween night at the 26th annual Rutland Recreation and Parks Department parade.

Hey, look! Isn't that Jaws the shark?

"No," the shark said.

You're not the one in the movie?

"No, I'm just a shark."

But isn't that Madonna with you?

"No, just a plain old punk."

Oh, I understand. You want to remain anonymous.

Maybe Santa Claus over there will speak to me.

My, Santa, you're looking younger than ever. How old are you?

"Six," Santa said.

O'Lantern Unmasked

Who was Mr. Jack O'Lantern in the annual Halloween parade in Rutland? For the answer to that question as well as a list of the prizes awarded after the parade, see Page 15.

Did you fly down from the North Pole?
"Not telling."

Gee, Santa, your beard feels as flat as felt. Are you sure it's real?

Santa nodded yes.

These celebrities sure are reserved tonight. I wonder if that gorilla wearing that hat and those sunglasses isn't...

Excuse me, aren't you King Kong?

"That's right."

Who's this with you?

"This is Mrs. Kong. We've been together about 20 years."

But what about that girl in the movie?

"Jessica Lange? That was only a fling."

Oh, anyone else with you?

"Well, there's Baby Kong back there on the World Trade Center."

The World Trade Center? How did you transport those twin towers from New York City to Rutland?

I see. The Rutland City Fire Department brought them up on a Dodge Ram pickup truck.

But wait. Why is "Baby" Kong 14-feet high with fluorescent eyes?

"We grow 'em big in Vermont," Kong replied.

Hey, Tina Turner! What brings you to Rutland?

"Fame and fortune!" Tina screamed. "I love Rutland! Love it, love it, love it!"

Tina squealed with delight as Boy George styled her hair with a chain saw, courtesy of Bourn Beautiful.

And here's Lois Lane, sliding away at the trombone.

Lois, I didn't know you played a musical instrument.

"I changed from baritone horn to trombone," Lois confided.

Lois marched along with 100 Supermen behind a Mill River Union High School banner.

Was the real Superman playing the clarinet? The flute?

Lois wasn't telling.

Here comes Vermont National Miss Hospitality and Vermont National Little Star!

"This is the director of the pageant, the one in the clown suit," Miss Hospitality's mother said.

And aren't those the Pumpkin Princesses?

It looks like one of them is having trouble with her coach. A dozen blue-jeaned bodies are pushing it.

"It has to be Rutland High School," one observer said.

It was.

Excuse me, Miss, were you expecting to be whisked away like this?

"Ah, no," Kristen Olson replied.

Oooo! Cartoon characters!

Hey, Mickey Mouse and Goofy, did you come up from Disneyland?

"No, Rutland," Mickey replied, bouncing about in a shiny top hat and tails. "I come every year!"

Here's Batman and Robin and Catwoman and, yes, Thunder Bunny!

What does the rabbit think of Rutland?

"It's hopping."

And it looks like the people down at KC's Tavern put Humpty Dumpty back together again.

How'd they do it, Humpty?

"Superglue," the egg replied.

Gee, the things you learn at this parade. I didn't know, for example, that Indiana Jones goes to Abraham Lincoln Elementary School.

Finally, here's Mr. Jack O'Lantern himself.

Why is Mr. Jack O'Lantern being chauffeured in a russet sunfire Corvette convertible?

"Because Mr. Jack O'Lantern has good taste," replied his driver, Rep. Donald J. Chiöffi, D-Rutland Town.

But who are you really, Mr. Jack O'Lantern?

"I'm unknown."

Oh, another one of those reserved celebrity types.

Flappers Shannon Inglee and Dawn Gallo, members of the Rutland High School band, high-stepped their way through a parade tune.

A marching "Port-O-Let" was a big parade hit.

Halloween Winners Abound

"Who's Mr. Jack O'Lantern?" grown-ups asked Thursday at the 26th annual Rutland Recreation and Parks Department Halloween parade.

"Giggy! Giggy!" youngsters replied.

And so it came to no one's surprise when Rutland City Fire Chief Gerald T. "Giggy" Lloyd appeared from underneath a big, orange papier-mache pumpkin head at the conclusion of the 40-unit parade.

Spectators and spooks packed city streets Halloween night to catch a glimpse of Lloyd as well as numerous floats, bands and costumed characters.

After his unveiling, Lloyd presented the Superintendent's Trophy for the most creative float to his own Rutland City Fire Department and its "King Kong" entry.

As two fury firefighters accepted the award, Lloyd quipped (See Page 22: Winners)

William Reardon of Rutland picks up the marble remnants of the Monsignor Thomas H. Connor memorial, which was vandalized this weekend at Monsignor Connor Park on Meadow Street.

Vandals Smash Park Monument

By KEVIN O'CONNOR

Rutland City officials on Monday picked up the pieces of a vandalized memorial to the late Monsignor Thomas H. Connor and promised they would somehow put them back together again.

A marble monument honoring Connor, a former dean of Rutland's Roman Catholic clergy, was smashed sometime this weekend, Rutland City Police reported.

The memorial, built nine years ago with community contributions, is situated at the Monsignor Connor Recreational Park on Meadow Street.

"I think it's outrageous and very disturbing," Rep. Alexander F. Keefe, D-Rutland City, said of the vandalism.

Keefe spoke Monday with John W. Cioffredi, city recreation superintendent, as workmen recovered pieces of the shattered park monument.

Vandals smashed the top slab of the marble monument. The slab featured a hand-carved bas relief of Connor as well as the words "Faith — Hope — Charity."

Dino and Derno Ambrosini of Rutland sculpted the memorial nine years ago. The two will attempt to repair the monument, Cioffredi said.

Cioffredi estimated that repairs would cost about $300.

Connor, who died in a 1975 automobile accident, had served as pastor of St. Peter's Church and as student chaplain and athletic director at Mount St. Joseph Academy. The church and the school are near the park.

(See Page 20: Vandals)

Vandals

Upon Connor's death, Sen. Gilbert G. Godnick, D-Rutland, who was then mayor of Rutland, renamed the Meadow Street playground in tribute to the monsignor.

The mayor's office also collected donations for construction of a monument at the park.

In 1976, more than 1,000 people filled St. Peter's Church for a memorial Mass for Connor.

Afterward, hundreds of people walked across the street to dedicate the monument and the park.

Aldermen Hear Recreation Center Pitch

By MONICA ALLEN

Rutland City school commissioners want to work with the aldermen to plan a new city recreation center.

However, they plan to disagree over the ownership of Park Street School. The school department maintains it owns the abandoned school and is considering selling it. Aldermen, however, say the city owns the building.

Aldermen Patricia Donnelly and Kevin Mullin were invited Thursday to a school board Building, Grounds and Athletic Committee meeting where cooperation on a recreation center was discussed.

Aldermen were invited after school officials learned that Recreation and Parks Superintendent John W. Cioffredi was moving forward on a plan to build a replacement for the Edwin W. Lawrence Recreation Center.

Rutland School Superintendent Lloyd A. Kelley Jr. suggested to aldermen that the school and city could pool resources to create a field house.

Donnelly said it was a good idea, but that Cioffredi was not in favor of working with the schools.

Cioffredi wants to build a functional community center that can accommodate all his programs and keep the cost of maintaining the programs about the same as it is currently, Donnelly said.

"He is concerned that the center will serve the school and not serve his people," Donnelly said. However, she added that Cioffredi said he would be open to cooperation if the plan would meet the needs of his department.

School Commissioner Gail Stickney insisted it would not be difficult to coordinate the use of a field house between the school programs and the city recreation programs.

Currently, the recreation department uses school gymnasiums for programs and the school department uses city parks and tennis courts for programs.

Kelley pointed out that there would be no need to purchase land because the school has land for a field house at the Rutland Area Vocational-Technical Center on Stratton Road.

He added the school department was planning to build another access from Gleason Road to the vocational center site. A parking area could be developed near this access road, he said.

"Last time we left the recreation center issue, the aldermen had voted they preferred to do it jointly with us," Kelley said. "The school board also voted to do it jointly. We agreed to come up with our share for the architectural study."

Talks between school and city officials on a proposed field house began in 1983, but ended in 1984 when pressing financial concerns arose in the city.

Kelley said the field house could contain an indoor gymnasium, possibly an indoor track and a place for programs for handicapped students.

Mullin said Cioffredi also needed classrooms for some of his programs.

Donnelly hopes the facility would have an indoor swimming pool.

"I think this city could use a pool to give the kids an opportunity for a swim team," Donnelly said. "I'd love to see an indoor pool."

"A pool would be wonderful," Stickney agreed.

Mullin explained that Mayor John J. Daley has set up an ad hoc committee to begin discussing a recreation center.

There wasn't much interest in a new center at City Hall, Mullin said, so Cioffredi proposed a committee to begin talks. He hopes the committee will "create excitement for a center and bring that excitement to City Hall," Mullin added.

Mullin advised school commissioners to write a letter to Daley and Cioffredi to present a proposal to cooperate on a field house.

Aldermen and school commissioners gently discussed the disagreement over the ownership of Park Street School.

The school department maintains it owns the abandoned school and has the right to sell it. A lawyer for the school department has backed up the board with this opinion.

However, city officials maintain the city charter states that school buildings are owned by the city and turned over to the school under a trusteeship.

Scranton Associates, an appraiser hired by the school board, recently valued the school at $146,000, Commissioner Carolyn Baker said.

The committee decided to recommend a delegation from the school board meet with Daley, aldermanic President Howard H. Shortsleeve Jr. and City Attorney Henry C. Brislain to discuss the disagreement over ownership.

Five Groups Join to Aid Area Needy

By KEVIN O'CONNOR

Believing that charity begins at home, five Rutland groups are collecting money, food and toys for the area needy this Christmas season.

Local volunteers range from high school students to city government employees, from disc jockeys to the Marines. "But we all work together," Beverly Castle of Vermont Catholic Charities said Friday.

The five groups are the WSYB/WRUT Christmas Fund, The Salvation Army, Mount St. Joseph Academy's Project Help, the Rutland Recreation Department's Christmas Toy Project and the U.S. Marine Corps Reserve's Toys For Tots.

While each is independent, each group said it shared with the others some type of resource — be it money or names of needy families.

Catholic Charities on Center Street acts as an indirect link between many of the groups, Castle said.

Each of the five groups said Friday that contributions made by Rutland residents would stay in the region to help the area needy.

The WSYB/WRUT Christmas Fund gathers money for gift certificates redeemable at Zayre, Ames and K Mart department stores, according to Laura Vien of WSYB/WRUT.

A needy family who receives a certificate can use it to buy winter clothing or toys, Vien said. Money saved by using the gift certificates can then be used for necessities like food or heating oil, she said.

The Salvation Army has placed seven red kettles at Rutland shopping areas to collect money for food, toys and clothing, according to Captain Phyllis Olmstead.

Olmstead said her organization has found that many needy families ask only for clothing and toys because they already receive food stamps.

"We try to meet the needs of the people," she said.

While WSYB/WRUT and The Salvation Army accept money, three other groups are asking for either toys or food.

As part of its annual Christmas Toy Project, the Rutland Recreation Department is collecting new, unwrapped toys at the Lawrence Recreation Center on Center Street.

A second group, Toys For Tots, is also accepting toys until Dec. 15 at the Midas Muffler on Woodstock Avenue.

And on Friday, Dec. 20, students of Mount St. (See Page 28: Giving)

Giving

Joseph Academy will canvass Rutland neighborhoods to collect food and money for the needy, according to MSJ teacher Timothy McCue.

The high school hopes to assemble and distribute about 400 food baskets, McCue said.

Vien said that WSYB/WRUT hasn't set any goal for giving "because we take whatever we can get."

She said that the radio station raised more than $45,000 last year. "The people in this city are incredibly generous," Vien said.

The Salvation Army said it also hadn't set any specific goal. "What's raised at Christmas goes out at Christmas," Olmstead said.

Olmstead added that people who can't contribute money can instead donate their time. The Salvation Army needs volunteers to collect money at familiar red kettles, as well as to prepare clothing, toys and food for the needy.

And while they always appreciate donations, the groups stressed that sooner is better, as it takes time to count money, purchase items and distribute them.

For WSYB/WRUT, that means radio station employees must double as fund volunteers. "This is our busiest season," Vien said. "It's a station effort."

Area needy people who want food, clothing or toys can contact Beverly Castle at Vermont Catholic Charities on Center Street in Rutland.

Castle said she collects names for MSJ's Project Help, Toys For Tots, and the WSYB/WRUT Christmas Fund.

The needy can also contact the Salvation Army on Wales Street from 9 a.m. to noon, Monday through Friday.

And needy parents who live in Rutland City can receive a toy for their children by contacting the Rutland Recreation Department on Center Street.

To enter a team, students are required to submit their team roster to the Recreation office by Wednesday, Dec. 18. Six or more players will constitute a full roster. There is no entry fee.

The first round of games will be played on Monday, Dec. 23, and final games will be played the following day. All teams should report to the Recreation Center at 10 a.m.

Recreation Center Group Maps Plans

A committee appointed by Rutland Mayor John J. Daley to come up with a plan for a new recreation center met for the first time Wednesday.

The committee is charged with outlining the scope and purpose of a new center, designing a facility, and determining cost and methods to pay for it.

John Ciolfredi, superintendent of the Department of Recreation and Parks, told the group of community and business leaders that the existing Edwin W. Lawrence Recreation Center is obsolete because it is not accessible to the handicapped and cannot keep up with the burgeoning recreational needs of the city. "Putting money into it isn't wise because it still wouldn't be adequate," he said.

A new recreation facility is not a new idea. Committee member David Wolk pushed for it five years ago when he was a city alderman, but the project fizzled under the pressures of strapped finances and new priorities.

A recreation center shared by the city and school district was later brought up but that plan died also.

Wolk asked Wednesday if the committee should look at involving other municipalities in a regional center. "I wonder if we're being myopic by just concentrating on Rutland City," he said.

The committee will also look at expanding the center's purpose to include other activities besides recreation and determining the size and a site for the center.

In addition to Wolk and Ciolfredi, the committee includes Chairman Robert S. Franzoni, City Planning Coordinator Jeffrey Wennberg, Marsha Wilson, Julian Frankiewicz, J. Fred Carpine and William Bloomer.

A Dream Come True

It was a dream come true for Rutland attorney J. Fred Carbine Jr. as he reached the magic 2,500 point milestone in his lengthy basketball career. To mark the achievement, Rutland Recreation Department Commissioner John Ciuffredi (left) presented the hoopster/lawyer with a trophy commemorating the accomplishment. Now in his 24th season of recreation ball, Carbine is taking aim at the 3,000 point plateau. At his current scoring pace he should reach that milestone around February, 1991.

Panel Considers Rec Center Site

By MONICA ALLEN

Members of the Rutland City Community Center committee discussed some possible sites for the proposed center at a meeting this week.

The committee, established by Mayor John J. Daley, also decided to invite three or four architects to its next meeting in January.

The committee hopes to work with an architect to design and estimate the cost of a new recreation center.

"We want to get a complete package of what we think should be done and then make a presentation to the mayor," said Robert Franzoni, the committee chairman. "And that will be the end of our job."

John W. Cioffredi, superintendent of the Rutland Recreation and Parks Department, said he would like to use land already owned by the city. This way, the city would not create more non-taxable land.

Among a number of sites discussed Thursday was the 20 acres of land Rutland City owns on Pine Hill, in the northwest section of the city.

However, Cioffredi said the land on Pine Hill near Giorgietti Athletic Complex — containing ball fields, basketball courts and an ice skating rink — had many rock ledges and was densely wooded. It might not be the best place for the center, he said.

Cioffredi also suggested the Howe-Richardson Scale Co. tract off Strong's Avenue in downtown Rutland. Aero-Jet of La Jolla, Calif., currently owns the 18-acre site, but the city has an option to buy the land.

The city hopes to find a commercial or industrial developer for the land.

Marsha Wilson, another committee member, suggested considering land owned by Rutland contractor Joseph Giancola at the end of North Church Street. The land was the site of the Sugar Maple Children's Center, which closed more than two years ago. Another day-care center currently is operating at the site.

Franzoni suggested the committee also could consider a tract of land near the Travelodge on South Main Street. The land is owned by the Perkins family.

City Planner Jeffrey N. Wenberg said there were a number of tracts of city-owned land that might be suitable for the project.

The committee plans to visit a number of community recreation centers to get ideas before deciding what would be best for Rutland.

Brattleboro has converted an old armory into a recreation center, and there are a number of modern community centers outside the state, Cioffredi said.

In a letter to the committee, Daley urged that the group develop a design layout for the center, estimate the cost of the center and consider ways it could be funded. Daley also suggested committee members take a number of field trips to other communities.

The mayor created the ad hoc committee after Cioffredi convinced him that there was a need for a new center. "We are outgrowing the Edwin Lawrence Recreation Center," Cioffredi said.

'Nothing for Kids to Do'

Of all the feeble excuses for the prevalence of drugs locally, in the state and nationally perhaps the weakest of all is that old wheeze to the effect that in Rutland "There's nothing for kids to do but drugs."

The truth of the matter is that drugs were not a problem in an earlier era when Rutland offered kids far less to do and facilities for their entertainment and enjoyment were virtually nonexistent. The use of drugs begins as an indulgence and is a poor alternative to other ways that the young people of this and other communities can occupy themselves.

It may very well be that the time has come to repeat once more in local terms that overused phrase popularized by President Kennedy. Ask not what this community can do for you, but what you can do for Rutland.

Not so many years ago families, churches and schools were responsible for keeping the kids occupied and out of mischief. Only during the past 25 years or so has the city had an organized recreation program that was intended primarily for the benefit of the young people of the community.

During the intervening period, a municipal program has been developed based at the Rutland Recreation Center. Numerous tennis courts have been constructed. Indoor tennis and racquet ball are available. One of the best vocational centers in the state has been built on Woodstock Ave. A hockey arena has been added to sports and recreation resources. Additional facilities are now under construction at Northeast School.

No. There's no lack of things for Rutland kids to do. Perhaps there are too many choices. Could it be that young people are offered too much and that they expect too much?

At the conclusion of a panel discussion on the drug problem in Rutland this week following the suicide of a widely known young local athlete, it was suggested that "This country has never taught young people how to fail—we've taught them how to be number one. We must teach how to accept failure."

Perhaps a better way to put it is teaching that not being number one isn't necessarily failure and that there are different ways of measuring success.

The pressure to succeed in the material sense may be too intense for many young people. And certainly there is intense pressure on athletes in professional sports where drug addiction has become so common. Yet every professional athlete is a star performer or he wouldn't make the grade against intense competition.

But the fact is that being a star athlete is no protection from drug addiction.

Come On, Feet, Start Walking

One of the best overall exercises is walking. During the winter, that can be difficult because of icy sidewalks and extreme cold.

The Rutland Recreation Department has begun just such a program at the senior center.

A pattern has been marked off so that the individual may keep track of how far he has walked. Along with that, a map of Vermont has been placed in view allowing anyone interested to keep track of distances, and to develop goals.

For example, three miles would be to Center Rutland, and additional three miles would be to Proctor, and so on. For those wishing to, a list will be kept of how far the individual has walked.

There is no charge. People can come to the center and begin.

Bemis said he believed the club would not agree to any development that would injure the ponds. However, he said a developer might not agree to allow city residents to continue to use the ponds.

Club members were scheduled to discuss the land swap in March, but Bemis said the issue would not be brought up until a meeting in April.

More than three developers have expressed interest in the land and many more would be interested if the club searched for developers.

The land could be sold or swapped only after two-thirds of the more than 400 stockholders agreed to the deal.

In a related matter, the committee decided to recommend giving the chamber permission to renovate the information booth in Main Street Park.

The booth has been closed for a year because of financial difficulties at the chamber, said Carol Stefany, a chamber member. During the past year, the chamber saw a sharp decline in the number of people visiting the main office for information, Stefany added.

"We lost a lot of people last year," she said. "A lot of people do not want to pay the chamber dues this year because of the support they lost."

Alderman Shirley Smith said she was against the booth reopening. She wants the park to be returned to the people and is concerned about traffic problems on Route 7.

Smith urged the chamber to consider another location. She suggested moving it to a site off Route 7 near where the new southwest bypass will connect with 7.

Stefany said the chamber did not want to move while there is still heavy road construction on Route 7 and the bypass.

The chamber has plans to renovate the building. Members

City Wants Say 3/11
In Development Of Country Club

By MONICA ALLEN

A committee of Rutland aldermen decided Monday to work for the preservation of land near one city park and allow an information booth to remain in another city park.

The Recreation Committee wants the city to have some say in what the Rutland Country Club does with its 208 acres of open land near the Pine Hill Park. Alderman Patricia Donnelly said it would be "wonderful" for the city to buy the land with Rocky and Muddy ponds to add to the city park.

The committee also decided to give the Rutland Region Chamber of Commerce a two-year lease on the chamber booth in Main Street Park. The full Board of Aldermen must vote on the agreement.

Rutland Country Club members have discussed giving their 208 acres of undeveloped land to a developer in exchange for a new clubhouse. The developer would build the clubhouse at the Grove Street golf course.

Because of the discussions, there has been an upsurge of concern about Rocky and Muddy Ponds, the two ponds on the country club land. A number of residents don't want to lose the ponds to development.

In past years, city residents have used the ponds for fishing and recreation. At one time there were picnic tables on the shore.

Robert Piper, a concerned resident, came to the meeting Monday with a representative from the Ottawaquchee Land Trust, an environmental group, to urge aldermen to preserve the ponds. Piper said losing the ponds to a developer would be a great loss to the city.

"People assume that Rocky and Muddy ponds are part of the park," Piper said. The city owns more than 300 acres in Pine Hill. The city land extends almost to the shore of Rocky Pond.

Piper has been contacting various nature groups to determine whether any would help the city buy the land for preservation.

"I think your idea is wonderful," said Donnelly, the chairman of the Recreation Committee. "It would be wise for the city to buy the land."

Donnelly, who has been researching the matter, said she believed there might be a grant to assist with the purchase.

Alderman Barry J. Keefe called it "premature" to talk about buying the land since there is no evidence the country club has made arrangements with a developer.

He said the board usually "waits until the Act 250 notice is tacked to the board to act."

But Donnelly said the city should become involved before any decision was made. Why resort to "crisis management when we don't have to?" she asked.

Piper said it would be easier to deal with members of the country club than a potential developer who had just purchased the land.

Donnelly asked City Planner Jeffrey N. Wennberg and John Cioffredi, the superintendent of the Parks and Recreation Department, to meet with the country club.

Wennberg said he would be glad to meet with Art Bemis, a member who sits on the development committee. Wennberg also urged aldermen to become involved with the country club to help plan for the best use of the land. The site is the one of largest tracts of undeveloped land left in the city.

Bemis said Monday, in a telephone interview, that club members would probably welcome cooperation with the city.

The country club has made no decision about swapping the land, he said. And no decision would be made until there is some public notice, he added.

Two MSJ Teachers Seeking to Develop Lacrosse in Rutland

By BOB FREDETTE

Tim Cook recalls the evolution of local high school hockey as he accepts the challenge of establishing lacrosse in Rutland. Cook played for Rutland High School in the first Raiders-Mount St. Joseph Academy hockey game in the mid-70s. He remembers that few players could do more than move around "in a 30-meter area" on the ice. "We were a bunch of football players on skates," Cook said.

But both local teams, their talent coming from the burgeoning Rutland Amateur Hockey Association youth program, eventually won state championships.

With that thought in mind, Cook and Chris Slack will oversee the introduction of club lacrosse, a new program sponsored by the Rutland Recreation & Parks Department.

The two Mount St. Joseph Academy teachers aspire to develop a program to feed high school teams. They would like to see lacrosse become a spring sport at MSJ and Rutland. The game is becoming established in other Vermont communities, including Barre, Woodstock and Middlebury.

Beginning this week, Cook and Slack, the former a native of Rutland and the latter a native of Scarsdale, N.Y., will be teaching lacrosse skills to all comers from grades 8-12. Some 30 prospects, including students from Rutland, MSJ, and Mill River of Clarendon, have registered. The program is not limited to city residents.

Following a month of practice, the Rutland lacrosse club will embark on its season's schedule of five games. Its first instructional session was held Monday in the Giorgetti Field parking lot.

"We're not trying to put together a team per se, but a club. We're trying to teach kids lacrosse and teach the community about it, as well," Cook said Wednesday.

"There were a lot of people in Rutland who knew something about hockey but had nothing to focus their attention on (before the RAHA youth program). The important thing is to get people in the area helping us.

"This is something we're starting out slow with this year, but eventually we'd love to see this turn into a regular high school sport."

Rutland and MSJ accepted lacrosse as a varsity sport when it was offered to the schools without financial obligation. Cook hopes that lacrosse can become financially self-sufficient, given the involvement of enough players and parents.

"If we can support ourselves, take care of our own equipment, travel and jerseys, we'd just want their (school) name. I don't see how anyone could refuse us," he said.

"In a couple of years, with enough interest maybe we can get teams from MSJ and Rutland, but we'd like to keep the feeder program going through the recreation department."

Lacrosse is a fast-paced, contact sport that in some ways resembles hockey, but with the contestants using a netted crook to catch, carry or throw the ball.

"If you are a good athlete, you can pick up lacrosse," said Cook. "A good athlete can pick up the skills in a matter of weeks. It's not like baseball and hockey, where you go for years and years developing."

Cook has been a lacrosse enthusiast since his exposure to the game at Deerfield (Mass.) Academy prep school. Slack played in high school and at the University of Vermont, and has served as an assistant coach at Castleton State College during the past two seasons.

Enthusiasm for the sport is mounting at MSJ, says Cook, who added that the screening of an instructional film at Rutland High School aroused the interest of students, and at least one administrator.

The Rutland club team will accept new players throughout the season, which will last approximately two months. Summer clinics might also be staged for club members.

Some female students have expressed an interest in the club, and though none have registered, Cook said they would not be turned away.

Cook and Slack will conduct practices on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, leaving open the option for Tuesday and Thursday practices. The coaches are looking for more games, and have already firmed up game dates with high school teams from Middlebury, Spaulding (of Barre), and West Lebanon, N.H.

"The future of actual (high school) teams depends on how much support we get from the adult community and how much the kids themselves work to become a strong club," Cook said. "The nature of the sport is such that once you've been exposed to it, it leaves something with you."

Gold-Medal Winner Gives His Message 3/26

By CHUCK CLARINO

Rafer Johnson, who was considered "the best athlete in the world" when he won the Gold Medal in the decathlon at the 1960 Olympic Games, brought a message to a gathering of recreation directors and town recreation committee members at the Royal's Hearthside Restaurant Tuesday.

"I'm interested in giving young kids a chance to take that first step so they can be the best that they can be," Johnson said, sounding his message and striking the theme of his 30-minute presentation.

Johnson, a very fit looking 50 year old dressed in a black running suit, is a goodwill ambassador for Hershey Foods. He was in Rutland to promote the Hershey National Track and Field Youth Program. The Hershey program is run in 50 states for youths between the ages of nine and 14. Johnson announced this year the southern district meet will be staged in Rutland on July 19.

"I was given the chance by other people who spent time and money putting programs together, while I was growing up in a small town in southern California where every kid was given that chance," Johnson said. "If I didn't have that beginning, I never would have ended up where I am today."

Although Johnson may not have reaped the commercial benefits that other gold-medal winners have in recent years, he received his share of honors and has achieved quite a bit after winning his gold medal in Rome.

In 1960, he was the Sullivan Award winner, signifying the best amateur athlete in America; won the Sports Illustrated and Sport Magazine man of the year awards; was named the Associated Press Athlete of the Year; and later was enshrined in both the National Track and Field Hall of Fame and the Black Athletes Hall of Fame.

He also served on the board of directors of the National Recreation and Parks Association; the Close Up Foundation; the national advisory board of the United States Association for the Blind; the Joseph P. Kennedy Foundation Special Olympics; and the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services' Physically and Mentally Handicapped Committee.

Johnson was on the board of directors for the 1984 Olympics and may be remembered most recently for running the last leg in the journey of the Olympic torch to the L.A. Coliseum. Johnson ran up the 146 steps to light the flame in the stirring opening ceremonies of the 1984 Olympic Games.

"I feel it's important that you give something back to the young people in hopes they will have the same opportunities as I did," Johnson said, speaking of his work generally and specifically on the the Hershey Track and Field program he has been a part of since 1978. "I would sooner a young person have that opportunity of competing in something like this. The more opportunities they have to search for how they can be the best they can be, the better."

Johnson talked of reliving the Olympic experience while watching "16 Days of Glory," a film about the LA Olympics.

"Without exception, each of the athletes drifted back and dealt with their early years," Johnson said. "When I was up there with the torch, I thought back to that summer when I was a kid and given a chance to become the best I could be."

Johnson firmly believes that the Hershey program can provide that kind of experience and says he is "willing to fly all night," like he did Monday evening to promote the program.

Last year, the Hershey track and field program involved 22 towns or communities and served up to 540 youths in the State of

Rafer Johnson

Vermont. There was only one statewide meet. This year, state director Darrell Lovelette of Essex plans to stage two district meets as well as the state meet.

"We hope to get in more communities from around the state," said Lovelette. "We plan two district meets — the southern meet will be in Rutland and the northern meet will be hosted by South Burlington on July 12. The state meet will be in Essex on July 19."

Rutland Recreation director John Ciofreddi, who was present at the gathering, has named Rutland track coach Greg McCallen to be the southern meet director.

Senior Citizen Gratitude

One of the best activities that has been sponsored by the Rutland Senior Citizen Center for the past six years is cross-country skiing. Each Friday during the ski season a group of senior citizens has enjoyed skiing at Mountain Meadows Cross-Country Ski Center.

We wish to thank John Tidd for making it possible for us to pursue such a wonderful, healthful sport. His skillful supervision of the Mountain Meadow Ski Center made it possible for all of us to safely enjoy the ski trails, meadows, and Kent Lake at Mountain Meadows. He has given us the opportunity to enjoy the quiet beauty of winter in Vermont? For this, we are indeed grateful.

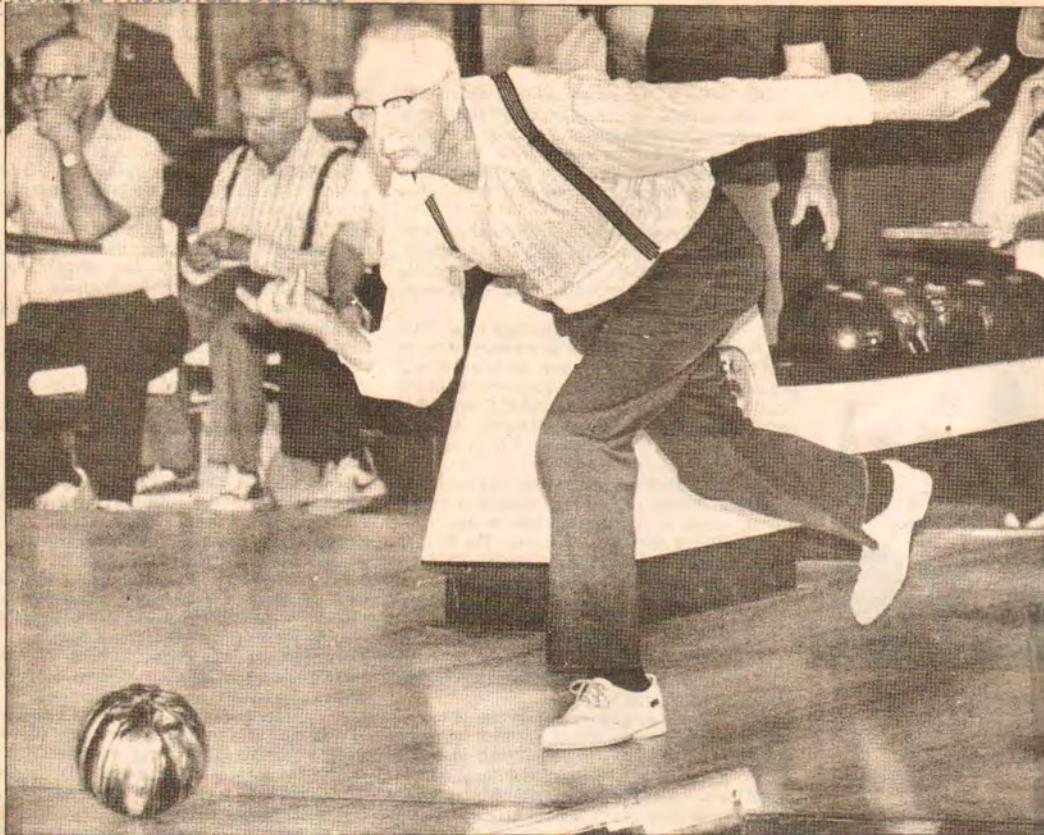

We also wish to extend our thanks to Jo-Ann and Bill Stevens, the proprietors of the Lodge at Mountain Meadows for extending a warm welcome to us in their pleasant lodge. How nice it was to come indoors after skiing and enjoy a bowl of delicious soup prepared by their skillful chef!

Lastly, we wish to thank Jeff Pratt, the operator of the Senior Citizen van, who provided us with safe transportation to Mountain Meadows in all kinds of weather.

We all look forward to next season!

Seniors Strike A Good Time At the Lanes

By KEVIN O'CONNOR
It's a contest of clamar at the Rutland Bowlerama.

In one corner, 18 lanes of bowling balls, tumbling pins and rickety metal pin setters. In the other, Senior Citizen Team 10: Edward Rivers, Grace Pelkey, Arlyn Hawley and the Rev. Joseph Reicher.

Reicher, minister of the Mendon Methodist Church when not team captain, bowls a strike. Everyone cheers.

"You can find a lot of noise, can't you," Hawley says.

"We're worse than teenagers," Pelkey says. "We hoot and holler."

"We're just kids," Rivers says. "Anyone's a kid here under 70."

Welcome to the Rutland Senior Citizen Bowling League, sponsored by the Rutland Recreation and Parks Department.

For 32 weeks from the fall to the spring, more than 75 senior citizens forget their age and concentrate on their bowling score.

"I love the excitement, the challenge, the exercise — and the stress," says Lucille Beaudry. Don't ask her age, ask her bowling average — it's 142 today.

"I like the social part of it, too," Kathryn Butler says. "Good for old age."

James Trapeni, a good bowler "in the past tense," agrees. "I'm 67 myself, but I don't consider myself old," he says.

Howard Barnes, whom Trapeni has known since high school, says he enjoys the exercise.

"How about meeting good friends?" Trapeni asks.

"I don't meet any good friends here," Barnes quips.

Barnes is accompanied by his wife, Katherine, who also bowls. "Or some people call it bowling," he says.

The husband and wife do not bowl on the same team — no, not for fears of divorce, but because of a league rule.

That doesn't stop Butler and

Rutland Historical

RUTLAND SOUTH ROTARY CLUB
Thursday morning Jim Bassett introduced John Ciuffredi, Rutland City superintendent of recreation and parks. He expressed his appreciation to Bob Martel, who is our coach for the little league baseball team that we sponsor. He said that Bob has put a lot of time into baseball for youngsters.

John came to Rutland 27 years ago to take over the Recreation and Parks Department. At that time his problems were a swimming pool that was in bad repair, no good ballfields, a condemned school for an office containing a desk with a $3,000 overdue bill, no proper staff and no budget. He now has a permanent staff of 11, and a lot to be proud of.

John talked about one of his projects called Safety Town. This is a summer program for toddlers in which the department sets up a small town at Rotary Field and trains the toddlers how to cross streets, how to act around swimming pools, how not to take medicine on their own, and other methods of starting them to think about safety. He said there is a waiting list for this program.

Another project that is under construction is the set of softball fields that are being built in the northeast section of the city. John said the Softball League is putting up some of the funds for this project.

It is official — we took top honors in the Red Cross blood drawing sponsored by the service clubs. We have not yet received the award, but Chairman Mark Wolinsky announced that the count was final.

Dave Ballou said that this was his last meeting with us. He has been transferred to the Boston area. He starts his new job next week. He will be back to help with the raffle and to visit, but he will be missed. By the way, Dave is a member of the Wallingford Rotary Club, where we are sure they will miss him also.

Next week Paul Garland will introduce ex-Gov. Richard Snelling. We would like to invite anyone interested to attend. If you plan to attend, get in touch with Arlyn Towle at 775-1475 by Tuesday.

On May 1 Barry Brody will introduce the speaker.

Ball Field Payment ⁵⁵ Disputed

By SUSAN HARLOW

The Rutland Recreation and Parks Department wants the city School Board to help pay for drainage repair at its new softball fields near Northeast Elementary School.

But the School Board's Finance Committee isn't sure that it should have to kick in any money to pay for correcting a mistake the school didn't make.

While constructing the softball fields across the road from Northeast, "poor engineering" resulted in a break in a water pipe that will cause flooding of school property, said Hayden Bride, chief of maintenance for city schools and president of the Board of Aldermen.

John Ciuffredi, superintendent of the Rutland Recreation Department, has asked the school to pay about $1,400, half the cost of the repair, Bride said. The Buildings, Grounds and Athletic Committee has already approved paying.

But why, asked committee members Gail Stickney and John Steele, should the school have to pay for a city engineer's error?

Because the water is running onto school property, Bride said.

But committee Chairman William Mayne said no. "We should say 'You have a problem. We don't have a fifty-fifty problem,'" Mayne said. "You don't go mess up another guy's lawn and then don't fix it."

(See Page 21: School)

School ⁵⁵

But Stickney said perhaps the school should pay, since the softball fields were for all the community.

The committee also countered another BG&A Committee recommendation when it voted to hire an architect to draw up plans for both renovation of a new science laboratory at Rutland High School and a four-room special education classroom addition.

Both projects are in the proposed bond issue. But if the bond issue is defeated May 20, the laboratory still will be needed, the school said.

The addition will be essential, too, because it will replace classroom space being taken for the science lab and provide teaching space for an instructor displaced by the new science teacher, said Superintendent Lloyd A. Kelley Jr.

The science lab renovation will cost about $15,000. The new addition will run about $315,000, but the state will pick up about 75 percent because it is for special education. Architects' fees for the plans will total about $25,000.

Money for the two projects are already in the 1986-87 budget.

The Buildings Committee had voted to look at the two projects separately.

The committee also took a look at the Maintenance Department's proposed budget, which totals $827,822. The budget for the current year is $604,870.

All other school departments were asked to bring in budgets the same as the current year, called "level funding." But maintenance has been short-changed for years, board members said.

The major increases in the budget are $52,000 to replace two buses, $42,555 more for supplies, and $77,000 in the repair maintenance budget for such things as rebuilding heat controls, refinishing lockers and boiler and elevator repair.

City Park Is Struck⁵⁻⁵ By Vandals

Rutland aldermen voted Monday to offer a $100 reward for anyone who helps police find out who vandalized Monsignor Connor Park during the past weekend.

"Every single bench was destroyed, the concrete and the fiberglass benches," Alderman Patricia Donnelly said. The bushes were snapped off at the bases. The field was dug up in portions. And more graffiti was painted on the park building, she said.

Rutland Recreation and Parks Superintendent John W. Cioffredi estimated the damage to the Meadow Street park in the Southwest neighborhood would cost the city $3,000 to repair, Donnelly said at Monday night's aldermanic meeting.

This is the second time in recent years that the park has suffered serious vandalism. Last year, vandals broke the marble memorial to Monsignor Thomas H. Connor that was carved by two Rutland brothers. Donnelly said the memorial was not broken this time.

Donnelly suggested the reward be offered by the board. Her motion was seconded.

Alderman John P. Cassarino added that people could use the Crime Stoppers tip line to provide

(See Page 24: Vandals)

Donnelly said the vandals

Committee Says OK To Picnic in the Park

By MONICA ALLEN

The Rutland County Farmers Market was given preliminary approval last week to put up a picnic table and a sign in Depot Park downtown, a request that was rejected initially by city officials.

The full Board of Aldermen must approve the recommendation of the Community Development Committee.

The committee approved the request from market coordinator Andrew J. Snyder, who said the table would remain at the park for people to use during the week.

John W. Cioffredi, Rutland recreation and parks superintendent, was against the sign and picnic table being placed at the small park at the intersection of Center Street, Evelyn Street and Merchants Row downtown.

He had said the picnic table would encourage youths to congregate at night. He also objected to the Farmers Market sign because he did not want to condone advertising in a city park.

Alderman Thomas G.

Macaulay said it was ironic that Cioffredi was afraid the table would cause people to congregate.

"I thought that was what parks were for," Macaulay said.

Cioffredi did not attend the Community Development Committee meeting.

Aldermen said they did not want to go against Cioffredi but felt the request was reasonable. Aldermen agreed it was probably better for youths to congregate in the downtown park than behind the Rutland Shopping Plaza.

Market organizers promised to maintain the table during the market season, which runs through October. The sign and the table will be stored during the winter.

Macaulay said he had no objection to the sign, but wanted to be sure it would not violate the state law against billboards.

Alderman Linda M. Welch expressed concern about vandalism. The Monsignor Connor Park on Meadow street has been vandalized this spring.

Fee per session is $15.

Snyder said the market would not expect the city to take responsibility for repairs needed because of vandalism.

In other business, the committee considered a request from two businesses for tax stabilization. The businesses plan to move into The East Creek Center, a small, industrial complex designed by Barbara J. Holmes of Rutland.

Holmes will lease sections of the newly constructed industrial building on Belden Road to the businesses. But they will be responsible for taxes on their sections of the building. Holmes also asked aldermen to grant stabilization to the Vermont Joinery and Hardwood Products, which is owned by Karl Petrovich.

Vermont Joinery, currently of Clarendon, would employ about five people, said John Bryer, the owner. Petrovich said his company, being operated in Rutland, would employ two people in the beginning. The joinery makes fixtures from a variety of materials. Petrovich's company makes wooden products.

Aldermen were hesitant to grant the two companies two years of freedom from property taxes. Alderman Thomas L. Donahue suggested the companies might be asked to make a commitment to stay in the city for a few years in return for the stabilization. Bryer and Petrovich were hesitant to make a commitment.

City Planner Jeffrey N. Wenberg encouraged the board to encourage some stabilization to other industrial incubators, but

Girls Charged In Graffiti Case

Two 15-year-old Rutland girls will be charged with painting graffiti on the building at Monsignor Connor Park on Meadow Street three weeks ago.

Petitions charging the two with alleged vandalism will soon be filed in Rutland District Court, Rutland Youth Officer Richard Fitzsimmons said Tuesday.

The names of the teenagers have been withheld, as is the procedure with cases involving juveniles. The case will be heard in a closed courtroom.

The two girls are not responsible for related vandalism that occurred around the same time, police said. Benches were smashed and the grass was torn up, Fitzsimmons said.

John Ciuffredi, Recreation Department superintendent, has estimated it would cost about $500 to paint over the graffiti. He is hoping the court will order restitution for the vandalism.

Baldwin, Ellig
Race Winners

By SCOTT FLETCHER

The 1986 Frank Crowley Memorial Road Race was held Sunday and the men's overall winner, Chris Baldwin of Burlington, led the race from start to finish, posting a time of 32 minutes, 11 seconds for the 6.2-mile (10 kilometer) course that stretched from Proctor to Rutland.

"It's not my best time for this distance," said Baldwin, 32, a native of Middlebury, "but my time was better than I'd like."

Baldwin was never really challenged during the race. He zoomed out to big lead right from the start, which was near the high school in Proctor. The course went along Route 3 from Proctor to Rutland.

At the two-mile mark, Baldwin had opened a 19-second margin on his nearest challenger, Michael Parker of Rutland, who was the eventual winner of the Men's Open Division with a time of 33:40. Trailing Parker by 23 seconds was Pittsford's Michael Coleman. Coleman finished second in the Men's Open Division with a time of 35:28.

Baldwin kept extending his lead. At the five-mile mark he was 30 seconds in front of Parker and a minute ahead of Coleman. "I only had one problem during the race," said Baldwin. "At about the half-mile mark I cramped up. I took some water — the only time I did — at about two miles. After that, I was okay."

"The course was beautiful, but it would have been easier without the wind. It was in your face the entire race except for the last two-tenths of a mile."

The first woman to cross the two-mile mark was a familiar name in Rutland track, Eileen Ellig, former schoolgirl star at Rutland High School. Ellig now runs for the University of Texas. She led the woman's race from start to finish, posting a time of 37:05.

"I was happy with my time, because I haven't really done any training for this," said Ellig. "I haven't run a road race in years, and I'm just about to take my summer break from running."

Ellig was the only woman to complete the course in under 40 minutes. Last year's overall women's winner, Caryn Etherington of Middlebury, finished second overall, and was the Women's Open champion with a time of 41:45.

The last man to cross the finish line was Gary Martel of Rutland, who was running in only his second competitive road race.

"I ran a three-miler in Florida a few years back," said Martel, 29, who is originally from Ludlow. "I run a few miles a day to stay in shape. I wanted to run this in an hour, and I crossed the six-mile marker in about 1 hour, 30 seconds, so I was pretty much on schedule. But the last two-tenths of a mile were uphill. What a way to finish."

The race was sponsored by the Recreation and Parks Department of Rutland. The program director and race coordinator was Tad Nunez. Last year's race drew 150 participants. Only 70 entered this year.

"The stream is washing the bank away," Cioffredi said. "We stand to lose the tennis courts if something isn't done."

The budget includes:

- $8,360 to refinish baseball in-fields.
- $7,690 to build a bathroom for the handicapped at Rotary Field.
- $2,800 to repair the bathhouse roof at White's Park.
- $3,000 to resurface the tennis courts at White's Park.
- $5,000 to install a rail at Giorgetti Park.

One budget item that stimulated a few questions was $333 for an office chair. "Who gets that?" asked Alderman Robert A. Stafford. Another alderman echoed Stafford's question.

Cioffredi explained that it was a special chair for a worker who had a back problem. The committee moved on to the next item.

Daley, who makes an initial review of all budgets before they are presented to aldermen, had already cut a truck, a snow blower, paving for basketball courts, and resurfacing for other tennis courts from the budget.

The committee approved $4,500 for the Rutland City Band and $4,000 for the Rutland Historical Society.

The $900 figure for teen dances was approved. Cioffredi said Daley had already cut the figure in half from the original $1,800 request.

Aldermen approved $377 for a new lighting system that may help protect Monsignor Connor Park from vandalism. The Meadow Street park has been hit by vandals numerous times in the recent years.

Aldermen breezed through a $21,612 budget for the Senior Citizens Center off Deer Street. The budget includes money for heat, electricity, holiday parties, athletic games supplies, a duplicating machine, maintenance of the van and other items.

The recreation budget is a small part of the $15.2 million budget for all city departments and the schools. The mayor's budget for departments supported by the tax levy is $7.4 million.

The remainder is for schools and the departments supported by user fees—sewer, water, traffic court and the sewage treatment plant.

Each department's budget will be scrutinized by the aldermen. A budget must be approved by June 30 to ensure that the tax rate will be set in July.

Nary A Slash For Recreation

By MONICA ALLEN

A half million dollar budget to support Rutland City's parks and recreation programs for next year whisked through aldermanic review Wednesday without a single nick.

The Recreation Committee once again praised John W. Cioffredi, superintendent of the Recreation and Parks Department, for presenting a good budget.

The $538,115 budget is up more than 15 percent from last year's $464,518 budget.

The largest part of the budget is $286,362 to pay salaries for 10 full-time workers and more than 60 part-time workers. All full-time city workers are receiving a 5-percent pay raise.

Cioffredi received permission from Mayor John J. Daley to hire an additional maintenance worker for approximately $14,000.

Reconstruction projects that Cioffredi plans to do at White's Park are two main reasons for the 15-percent increase.

Swimmers will have sounder footing at the pool thanks to one of the projects and the tennis courts may be saved from serious erosion thanks to the second.

The budget includes $16,250 to reconstruct the deck around White's Pool. The current deck is made of asphalt and is slippery when wet, Cioffredi said.

He hopes to win federal grant money to match with the $16,000 to pay for a new concrete deck. It would be constructed in the fall after the swimming season.

The budget also includes $44,000 to reconstruct an eroded portion of the park and solve the erosion problem.

Rutland Boys Roll On

By SCOTT FLETCHER

The Rutland High School boys' tennis team rolled into the semifinals of the state tournament dropping only one set while sweeping past Mount St. Joseph, 7-0, Thursday at the Rotary Courts in Rutland.

Rutland, the No. 1 seed in the tournament, will meet Essex today at South Burlington. MSJ finished the season at 4-6.

Rutland continued its dominance over crosstown rival MSJ. In the only full seven-match contest played between the two teams earlier this year, Rutland won, 7-0, without dropping a set. Thursday, the Mounties doubles team of Herb Stevenson and Bill Crowley took the middle set from Todd Weaver and Senan Murdoch, but lost in three sets, 7-5, 4-6, 6-3.

Rutland Coach Gene Poplawski admitted the result was what he expected.

"I figured on a clean sweep," said Poplawski. "We beat them before, 7-0, so things went pretty much as planned."

It did not look that way at first. The Mounties' Andy Allen gave Rutland's Andy Keller a tough battle before losing, 6-3, 6-4. MSJ's No. 2 player, Zander Livingston, had a chance to win the first set against Scott Smith, but lost, 6-4. Smith won the second set easily, 6-1. The three other singles matches were not close. The two doubles matches were irrelevant since Rutland led, 4-0, when they began.

The Keller-Allen match was closer than the score would indicate and could have easily gone three sets. Allen was up a service break early in the first set, but could not hold his advantage. Keller broke Allen to take a 5-3 lead, and easily served out the set with a stiff breeze at his back.

The second set stayed on serve until the fifth set when Allen fell behind 0-40. He saved only one break point before double faulting away the game. Keller earned his victory in the next game. Serving against the wind, he fell behind 0-40 when he double faulted twice and committed an unforced error. He fought back from triple break point to win the game and lead, 4-2. The last four games stayed on serve and Keller had the match.

"We didn't play Essex so I don't know too much about them," said Poplawski. "It will be nice to play a team we haven't seen yet."

The Mount St. Joseph girls' tennis team advanced to the semifinals of the state tournament by defeating Montpelier, 7-2, Friday at White's Playground in Rutland.

Killington

Music Fest

Begins Soon

SHERBURNE — Music will be wafting down from the mountains and through Rutland County this summer when the first annual Killington Music Festival features some of the country's best young musicians.

Forty students from the Eastman School of Music, the Juilliard School, Southern Methodist University and North Texas University will participate in the festival, which will include instruction and performances.

The faculty will include musicians from those schools and The New York Woodwind Quartet, The Canadian Brass, The Dallas Symphony Orchestra and The Dallas Chamber Orchestra.

The students, who range in age from 15 to 25, will be performing every Friday night from July 4 to Aug. 8 at the Snowshed Lodge. Their 15 professors will perform on Monday nights between June 29 to Aug. 9, also at Snowshed Lodge.

The performances, which will be open to the public, will also be held in the Center Street Alley in Rutland and at several other undetermined sites around the county.

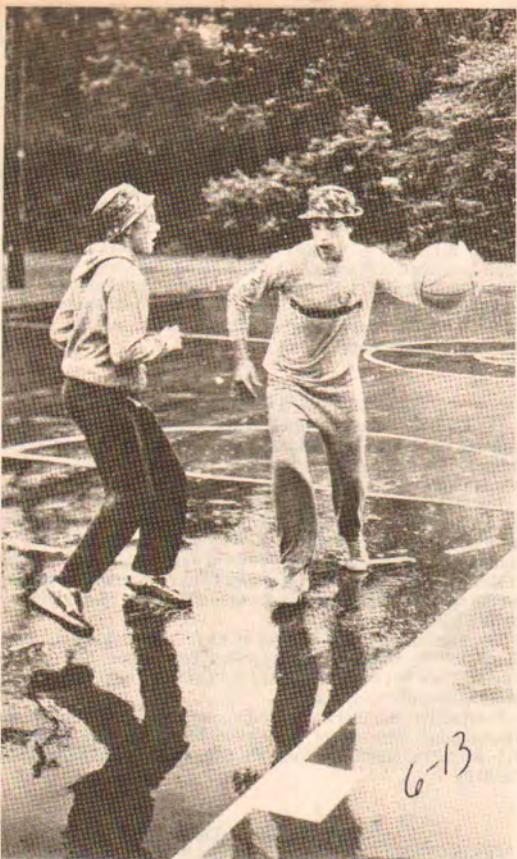

The Alley concerts will be Thursdays at noon. They will start July 3 and will run for six weeks. People can call 773-4112 for further information.

Ronald Neil, the festival director, said the program would offer the young musicians intensive courses on soloing, chamber music and chamber orchestras.

They will be learning to perform music ranging from Beethoven to Mendelssohn to Bach.

This is the first year of the festival, which Neil said he wanted to make into an annual event.

"I'm quite excited about it," Neil said. "We have an enrollment of good, solid students."

Shooting in the Rain

Most people wanted to stay indoors during Thursday's day-long rain, but Rutland residents Eric Godlewski, 13, (left) and Andy Rice, 14, found it the perfect time for a game of one-on-one. The pair sloshed through puddles and rain for more than an hour at Rotary Field on North Main Street.

Girls' Softball Program in Rutland

The Rutland Recreation Department will offer a girls' summer softball program. The program is open to girls in grades 5-8. Registration is continuing at the Lawrence Recreation Center from 8:30 a.m.-12 noon and 1-5 p.m. There is no charge, but a parent is required to register the child.

The program will take place at Msgr. Connor Park from 1-3 p.m. on Tuesdays and Thursdays beginning June 24 and ending July 17.

Teams will be established after the first week of practice. Players will have the opportunity to learn the basic skills of softball.

Rec Dept. to Hold Track Camp

The Rutland Recreation and Parks Department is having a two-week Track Camp this summer from July 7-18. Fee for the camp is $15 for residents, and $20 for non-residents.

Registration is ongoing at the Lawrence Recreation Center. Those interested must register by July 3. Rutland High School track coach Greg McClallen will be coordinator and head coach of the camp.

The schedule is listed as follows: ages 6-9 will work from 9:30-10:30 a.m.; ages 10-12 from 10-11 a.m.; and ages 13-14 from 12:30-1:30 p.m.

Law-Abiding Citizens Jailed

In Depot Park in downtown Rutland on June 19-20 some very respectable citizens will be behind bars. No, it is not a sudden burst of criminal activity in the region or a filming of "Miami Vice." It is a Jail and Bail to benefit the March of Dimes.

At the park each day from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., area residents will be jailed voluntarily for one hour. After sentencing they will contact friends, family, fellow employees and anybody else to raise the bail for release. All funds will go toward the medical research and educational programs that aid the March of Dimes in their fight against birth defects.

Serving as honorary chairman of the special March of Dimes event is Charles Shortle of Shortle Subaru. He is being joined by many community organizations, including representatives of the West Rutland Rotary Club.

Additional volunteers are needed. If you have a few moments to spare to help the March of Dimes, telephone the Vermont Chapter in Montpelier at 223-6322 or write P.O. Box 1216, 79 Main St., Montpelier, Vt. 05602.

Market Says City Is Unfair

By MONICA ALLEN

The director of the Rutland County Farmers Market charged this week that the city was discriminating against the market.

While other organizations are allowed to put up signs in a downtown city park, market director Andrew Snyder said, the market cannot install its sign to promote the market for the rest of the market season.

Rutland city officials said they were simply upholding an ordinance when they told Snyder he could not permanently install a sign in Depot Park.

Snyder wanted to put up a sign that read: "Welcome to Downtown Rutland, Home of Vermont's Largest Farmer's Market." The sign would be in place seven days a week until the market's last Saturday in the fall. The market operates two days a week.

Some aldermen have sided with Recreation and Parks Superintendent John Ciuffredi. They have agreed with him that the sign would violate an ordinance that prohibits advertising on city land.

But other aldermen say the sign should go up. The 13-year-old market has been a positive addition to the downtown, they maintain. And they say that ordinances have been broken before.

Aldermen approved the sign on May 19 despite a warning from Ciuffredi that it would violate a city ordinance.

(See Page 20: Market)

But on Monday, the board voted to rescind the May 19 approval when Building Inspector John J. Kollmer said the board would have to waive the ordinance before the sign could go up.

A number of aldermen said this week they did not like going against the wishes of Ciuffredi.

But Snyder said the city has been inconsistent. The United Way was allowed to place a sign in the park during its fund drive. Signs to advertise sleigh rides and blood drives have also been allowed. And banners hang over city streets, he added.

"The United Way should have every right and reason to have their sign right in the middle of the downtown, but so should we," Snyder said.

Ciuffredi said this week that the United Way was a different story.

"The thing for the United Way is a traditional thing that's always been there," Ciuffredi said. "I look at it a little different. I don't look at it as advertising."

He added: "If someone is running a special event, a one-time thing, I've gone along with that. I'm not anti-farmer's market. Everything the farmers market has asked for, I've given them."

However, Ciuffredi said he had to oppose the sign and the picnic table that the market wanted to donate to Depot Park. Aldermen approved the picnic table donation.

"I don't think it's that kind of a park," Ciuffredi said. "I'm not opposed to people coming and sitting on the grass. But some time ago, we did have a problem with people loitering in the park and parking deck after hours. That's my concern."

Snyder said the members of the farmers market were not going to give up. They met this week and decided to continue the fight for the sign.

The market sees it as a downtown issue. They view their sign as a promotion for the downtown.

Alderman Thomas L. Donahue said he believed the market should have the sign. He and Alderman Laurent LaMontagne were the only two to vote against rescinding the May 19 sign approval.

But LaMontagne said he voted against rescinding because he believed there was no need to take back the action, since the building inspector had ruled that the sign would violate an ordinance.

Alderman Barry J. Keefe had argued for the sign, but ended up voting to rescind the action. He had expected a motion to grant permission for the sign.

Other aldermen said the only way to allow the sign would be to change the ordinance.

Aldermen Frank McCormack, Linda Welch, Robert Stafford and John Cassarino also voted to take back the sign approval.

"I'd like to see the sign up there," McCormack said this week. "I don't think it hurts anything, but I don't see how to get it in there."

Alderman Sigismund Wysolmerski, who was late for the meeting, said he would have supported the sign.
